CERMAK BURIED; 30,000 MARCH IN PROCESSION

National Leaders Join in Tributes.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Mayor Anton J. Cermak was buried yesterday after the most spectacular funeral demonstration ever seen in Chicago.

From the cold dawn, when hundreds still stood at the doors of the city hall where his casket rested, until he was placed in his tomb as the sun cast long shadows over Bohemian National cemetery, at North Crawford and Bryn Mawr avenues, the people surrounded him, marched for him, in uncounted thousands.

This last tribute took the form of a mighty parade of soldiers and citizens, all the panoply and color of military honors, a service at the Chicago Stadium, where not only Chicago but all of Illinois', outside states', and national leaders took part, and the final rites at the cemetery, where the crowds braved the bitter winds until the last moment.

Mayor Inspiration to People.

If the story could be told in music, Dvorak's "New World Symphony" would express it in part, but it would need Beethoven to reach the finale. It was not so much an expression of mourning and sorrow over the fallen leader as of determination of an aroused people to do greater, finer things for the Chicago which Mayor Cermak loved so well.

In this sense it might be called a political demonstration. The four eulogists at the Stadium services sounded the same note, that of carrying on the Cermak policies for better government, finding courage in his indomitable will, finding hope not only for Chicago but also for the American dream in this story of an unschooled immigrant boy rising to greatness among the nation's martyrs. The way is open, they said. It only needs lionhearted courage. That was their lesson.

It was a nonpartisan, nonreligious gathering in a denominational sense, but those who attended the Stadium ceremony, and there were 23,000 packing every seat in the four tiered structure, felt the beauty that reached toward things of the spirit.

All Face East for Taps.

While carillions, bugles, muted drums, the clatter of cavalry, the sound of marching hosts under many banners reached many points at the memorial hour, the mayor's bronze casket, carried on an open army caisson drawn by six black horses through the streets, was placed in the center of the Stadium, where a green place, lovely with flowers, had been prepared. Here it rested for an hour while the audience listened to music and addresses. At 2 o'clock all faced east while a bugler sounded a stirring "taps." Then the final march began.

The cemetery service furnished a fitting climax to the day. A crowd estimated at 50,000 sought to approach the Cermak tomb, which had been roped off for some distance among the trees. During the service there were cries indicating that the rope had broken and the crowd surged forward, pressing against the mourners with such force that several were slightly injured.

This service took place on a carpeted space in front of the family mausoleum. The casket was placed on a velvet covered stone and draped with the flags of the United States and the city of Chicago. Ten army trucks had delivered the floral offerings, and these were placed around the stones and against the trees, where small boys had climbed to view the proceedings.

Lodge Members Attend.

The Bohemian Odd Fellows' lodges of Chicago and Cicero were there 500 strong, each member wearing an orchid collar of red or blue trimmed with gold fringe. The Masonic Lawndale lodge of which the mayor was a member was there in a body of 300. James Rada, the master, read the ceremony. The Knights Templar, Columbian commandery, were there in uniform under the direction of George V. Banks, commander.

The mayor's three daughters were weeping as they sat by the grave. His granddaughter, Vivian, was more composed. Twenty-five children from the Bohemian Orphanage and Old People's home, each with a white flower, were there. One of the boys made a brief address in Bohemian thanking Mayor Cermak for all he had done for them. A little girl talked in English. There was a Masonic service and a brief religious service.

Then Woodlawn post of the American Legion fired a salute and taps

U. S. to Reopen First Banks Monday

President Asks Power to Cut Half a Billion

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—Congress is to turn over to the executive the powers which it has been fearful of wielding itself—to slash veterans' benefits and to pare federal salaries, and thereby save more than half a billion dollars in government costs to the taxpayer.

In a special message President Roosevelt today demanded of congress dictatorial authority to transmute the dross of congressional oratory about economy into a saving calculated to go at least half of the billion dollar road toward a balanced budget.

And by nightfall, with this presidential impulse to push them on, leaders of the house and senate were ready to report that the necessary legislation would be on its way to passage tomorrow.

Ready to Push Bill.

Under drastic rules such as were used to rush through the emergency banking bill yesterday, the new economy bill is expected to complete its house passage by tomorrow night. In the more deliberate senate, veterans' advocates and friends of the federal employés are bound to cause delay, but Democratic leaders have announced themselves ready to put on legislative pressure if necessary.

Nor will this be the end of the President's budget balancing effort, it was announced.

A bill to legalize and tax beer is to be taken up and passed in the new and dripping wet congress before another two weeks are up.

The President intends to make broad use of the power given him by the last congress to reorganize, consolidate, and abolish bureaus.

Proposed Savings Listed.

According to figures given out today by the senate Democratic leader, Joe T. Robinson of Arkansas, and the house majority floor leader, Joe Byrns of Tennessee, the gap between federal revenue and federal income is to be filled as follows:

Veterans' savings	$400,000,000
Reorganization savings	200,000,000
Beer tax	150,000,000
Total	$875,000,000

The savings to be accomplished under the bill introduced today will mean lopping off the compensation of veterans now drawing allowances from the federal government for disabilities which have no connection with war service, but it will not touch the service disabled man.

It will mean a possible maximum 15

NEW CURRENCY RUSHED OUT TO RESERVE GROUP

Chicago Banks Act

Chicago loop banks take steps to reopen through federal reserve system. Gov. Horner proclaims extension of Illinois moratorium and announces that action will be taken to enable state banks to reopen on a parity with national banks. Details on page 3. Gold hoarders rush to exchange the metal for currency. Details on page 6.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—With the new asset currency being shipped from the government printing plant "by the bale," as Secretary of the Treasury Woodin put it, the President will begin reopening the sound banks of the country on Monday.

It will take several days, if not a week or more, to get the approximately 5,000 unquestionably solvent banks in the federal reserve system reopened and fully functioning again. The delay will be caused mainly by the task of separating the sheep from the goats, determining which banks are sound and fit to reopen and which banks are unsound and due to be placed in the hands of federal conservators for reorganization or liquidation.

Need Time to Get Money.

In addition it will take several days to get the new currency, authorized by the emergency banking act of yesterday, generally distributed for the use of banks resuming business.

Meantime Secretary Woodin issued instructions to state banking authorities on how to reopen sound state banks not members of the reserve system.

The reopening of the banks will take place under the authority of an executive order issued today by President Roosevelt which lifts the restrictions of the national banking holiday on those permitted to resume.

Although on the face of the order

4500 INJURED; 16 SHOCKS; 6000 SQUARE MILES HIT

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—(Special.)—A series of terrific earthquake shocks, beginning at 5:[illegible] p. m. today (7:53 Chicago time), caused at least 123 known deaths, injuries to 4,500 persons, and property damage of many millions in Los Angeles and other southern California cities.

At 10:59 a. m. there had been fourteen distinctly violent shocks, of which the first was the most destructive, and 140 of lesser intensity. The quake stricken area covered 6,000 square miles, from Ventura to San Diego along the coast and for thirty miles inland.

The epicenter of the earth disturbance, however, was probably the sea bottom close to Long Beach, where the loss of life and property damage was greatest.

Where the Deaths Came.

From this center death and desolation spread over a triangular area bounded by downtown Los Angeles, Santa Ana, and Hermosa Beach. Within this triangle the casualty list was:

Long Beach—65 dead, 1,000 injured.

Los Angeles—12 dead, 3,000 injured.

Watts—4 dead.

Compton—13 dead.

Santa Ana—3 dead.

Huntington Park—12 dead.

San Pedro—2 dead.

Wilmington—1 dead.

Bellflower—3 dead.

Artesia—4 dead.

Hermosa Beach—1 dead.

Garden Grove—1 dead.

Walnut Park—1 dead

Norwalk—1 dead.

Long Beach Pitiful.

Long Beach presents a pitiful scene of disaster. Although its 65 dead have been taken from the ruins of its demolished buildings, searchers still are going through the ruins looking for others.

Its residents are camping in the streets, warming themselves at little fires they have built when they are not crowded around the blazes that still mark the spots where homes and business buildings stood.

Thousands of sailors and marines sent from the United States fleet in the San Pedro harbor are guarding the property that is left in the water front towns from pillage.

These sailors are augmented by members of the American Legion, likewise doing patrol duty. Their work is necessary, as many residents of the suburb have all their personal belongings that were saved piled up in the streets.

Tell Dramatic Stories.

Dramatic stories are told of the swift stroke that made Long Beach into wreckage. Almost every building along Pine avenue has caved-in walls, shattered windows, and demolished roofs. The plant of the newspaper Press-Telegram was wrecked. So were portions of the Woodrow Wilson High school, the city fire station, and the Imperial theater.

Five men were buried when the fire station was shaken down. Two youths died in the high school, where a track meet had just been completed. In a department store two women were crushed to death and the manager of the theater was killed in his office.

Some of the buildings furnished weird sights. Steel framework stood, twisted and tragic, after bricks and mortar surrounding had been stripped away. The residential districts of Long Beach suffered as severely, their houses shaken down, their lawns covered with brick and stone and wood.

Steady Stream of Injured.

All through the town moved or sat silently and hopelessly the residents. A steady stream of injured flowed into the Seaside hospital, escorted by policemen and the sailor and marine guards.

Behind the institution, laid in rows upon the ground, were the bodies that have been recovered. Ambulances carried them there. The drivers hastened away again to carry in more dead or to help those still living but in dire need of aid.

Three Towns Are Cut Off.

San Pedro, Wilmington, and Long Beach were cut off by the quake from all wire communication with the outside world.

The Signal Hill oil field, with its derricks standing like a skyline of skyscrapers over Long Beach, was aflame shortly after the first shock. The red glare could be seen for 25 miles. There were fires also in Wilmington. In both towns electric wires, gas and water mains were put out of commission.

All over Los Angeles and the suburbs there were fires and all fire departments were summoned for steady duty. Police ambulances to the number of sixty were crowded into service and all the hospitals, some of them still unsafe themselves if further shocks came, were filled with the injured. Five hundred physicians were striving late tonight to alleviate their sufferings.

Troops Ordered Out.

At the 9th corps headquarters of the army in San Francisco orders were dispatched for the 800 men at Fort MacArthur to cooperate with the civil authorities in southern California, to do guard

PAYS HIS INCOME TAX WITH $1,300 IN GOLD PIECES

A shabbily dressed man appeared yesterday in the office of Gregory T. Van Meter, collector of internal revenue, and paid his income tax with $1,300 in gold pieces. The payment was said by office employés to be the largest individual gold payment ever accepted in the local office.

Collector Van Meter announced that all field collectors had been called into the federal building office to help in making out returns. Requests for help are unusually heavy this year. In THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn, approximately 10,000 persons have been advised in income tax matters.

A constant stream of taxpayers filed into the collector's office yesterday, and armed guards were stationed in the federal building because of the large percentage of cash payments. The office will be open all day today to accommodate taxpayers. With the deadline for the first quarterly payment set for Wednesday, Collector Van Meter pointed out that the usual extension of six months is made to persons with valid reasons. Persons taking advantage of the extension must file tentative returns and must pay 6 per cent interest until the payment is made.

You Run, Duck Your Head as Houses Crash

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—There's one sensation that makes you want to run for the middle of the street and duck your head. That's when the floor of the building you're in tilts your chair upward, first to the right, then the left, the ceiling curves in unison, and everything in the world does the shimmy. Earthquakes are accompanied by a rumble, you realize, but it's a rumble that you feel through your feet rather than hear.

Smokestacks Sway Crazily.

That's the way your earthquake observer and 1,200,000 others suddenly felt at 5:53 p. m. today when a world that previously had seemed filled with closing movie studios and solidified bank deposits all at once became full of fluid masonry, hurtling bricks, screaming women, shrieking fire sirens, autos bumping into each other on the wrong side of streets, and crazily swaying smokestacks and building towers.

The movie studios and the banks abruptly lose consequence and every one in the office buildings, at least nearly every one except phone girls, newspaper workers, hospital attendants, and those who have been through past earthquakes and realizing the danger of standing on sidewalks where brick walls invariably fall, ran for the fire escapes, the elevators, and the stairways while chandeliers swung and electric lights blinked off and then, fortunately, on again.

Thousands Rush Into Streets.

From the vantage point of a third story window at 1st and Broadway, an elevation commanding the sweep of Los Angeles theater and business thoroughfare, the city hall and county buildings, thousands were seen to gush from the outer portals of office buildings. Some rushed into the center of the street. Autos had to dodge them.

Bricks and chunks of masonry come rumbling down. They tear off overhead street signs, plunk through the papery tops of automobiles, splinters strike this and that pedestrian, whose expression indicates a yielding disbelief that such things can really happen, and you realize that one of the older adopted Californians at your side is telling the truth when he says, "This is a bad one."

A group of frightened girl workers and some youths rush by you. They jam for a moment in the entrance to the iron stairway. The floor of the building continues to bend gently up and down, as a ship rolls.

Your Heart Skips Beats.

Your heart skips several beats and you look up to see if the plaster on the ceiling has cracked. It hasn't, but you look out the window and see that an entire cornice of a structure not a block away is lurching over to fall on the street. You're too far away to yell a warning to misguided safety seekers who hug the walls and seem to be standing just where they will be hit, but they move in time and the cornice drops, only a chunk at a time, anyway.

Gray dust, white dust, brown dust rises in the dusk all over the city. North along Broadway you see a sudden flash. You wonder if a gas tank has exploded. But there is no roar. The flash is suddenly gone; it blinks a second time. Later you find that the quake has short-circuited some main electric line.

The shrieks of the police and ambulance sirens redouble. The phone girl tries to get Pasadena. She can't make it. She tries to get Long Beach. Phone absolutely dead. She tries San Pedro. Phone dead again. The tele-duty and to assist in relief work wherever possible.

—Orders, it was said, would be speedily given at Sacramento for the mobilization of National Guard troops to do similar duty.

The first and most severe of the temblors lasted just a minute. In Los Angeles it converted the calm of late afternoon, the pre-dinner hour, into frenzied activity. There was a rush of those in downtown buildings for the open air. Many persons were injured leaping from windows in an attempt to get away from buildings which were threatened with collapse.

Huge chunks of concrete plopped upon automobiles in the streets, injuring the occupants. Bricks and cornices fell in a rain upon the pavements. A cloud of dust, originating with the falling debris, rose and covered the downtown section like a gray pall.

Crowds Mill About.

The half dazed crowds in the street, uncertain as to where to go, milled about. Now and then there was a scream as some one was struck. There were cries of "Fire!" Some prayed. Some cursed. All moved, and as they moved there were fresh fears as the usually solid earth trembled and shook with the repeated shocks.

At 1st street and Broadway a building collapsed. The old Chamber of Commerce building became a wreck in a few seconds. Four buildings, widely separated but along one line, probably that of the earth fault that caused the disaster, were all severely damaged. These were the California bank at 8th street and Central avenue, a warehouse at Central avenue and 46th street, an auto agency at Central and Slauson avenues, and a warehouse at 1039 Crocker street.

Other buildings severely damaged were the Willys Overland Pacific at 420 West 11th street, the Union Hardware at 1st and Alameda, a structure at 61st street and Compton avenue, and a factory at Compton and Florence avenues.

A huge bakery on the east side burst into flames and firemen rushed to control the fire. Fixtures in the Los Angeles Times building, which was otherwise uninjured, moved two or three feet. The old Hall of Records suffered severe damage.

The city hall, a tall skyscraper, suffered little. The Hall of Justice suffered cracks and falling plaster, and prisoners in the jail on the upper floors went into complete panic, fearing they would all die in the ruins. The building stood up and the inmates were unharmed.

Diners Flee Building.

On the west side a Methodist church was damaged. The Scottish Rite Cathedral building stood intact, all but its false front of masonry, which crashed into the streets. Scores of diners in the building were unhurt, but ran out through the suddenly made exit to the street.

Street car traffic was halted for a time, then resumed. Electric lights flashed off and on as the temblors came and ceased. But the water mains held firm and the lights continued to function within the city.

Policemen and firemen hurried to the streets to aid the injured. Those first picked up were taken to the Georgia street receiving hospital. Bricks were falling from its walls and the patients inside were striving to get out.

There was a melee at the doors. Then calm returned in a measure and the injured were kept in the institution. Physicians and nurses braved the unsteady forces of earth to aid and all patients were cared for as they were taken to this and other hospitals in the city.

Many Leap from Windows.

By 9:30 more than 3,000 persons who had been hurt were treated at the Los Angeles receiving hospital. Two hundred were injured leaping from windows, 100 were struck by falling furniture in their homes and offices, 300 had suffered blows from falling chimneys and 100 by fire and explosion. The remainder were those whose hurts came from falling bricks and cornices.

So many patients were carried to the institution that it was necessary to leave hundreds on stretchers in the yard. All members of the hospital staff were called to duty, the day shift taking up its labors here and the night shift being sent to help out in Long Beach, Compton, and other nearby towns.

At San Pedro H. W. Murray, a fireman from the U. S. S. Marblehead, lost his life when a building wall fell on him. A motorist was killed in Wilmington when he lost control of his car when a temblor came.

Buildings Are Leveled.

Thirteen persons were dead in Compton, it was reported. "All masonry buildings in the town are leveled," read a message from the police there. The new hospital there was among the wrecked buildings, according to early advices. Urgent calls for help were sent.

Compton is about halfway between Los Angeles [downtown] and Long Beach. At Watts, a nearby town, it was said three persons were buried when the police station collapsed.

South of Redondo the Palos Verde Hills slipped from their ancient foundations, burying highways and—possibly—covering motorists.

At Santa Ana Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ellison of Oakland, Cal., and Earl Adamson of Santa Ana were killed by falling masonry. The Polytechnic High school at Santa Ana and the Huntington Beach High school burned.

Postoffice Is Wrecked.

Inglewood, the scene several years ago of a destructive quake, lost its postoffice. The building tumbled into the street, burying several automobiles. The tower of the town hall fell and the ruins of the postal structure were searched for bodies.

At Huntington Park it was reported that five bodies had been recovered and taken to undertaking establishments. A tire reduction and storage plant was wrecked there and the city hall damaged.

Culver City, Beverly Hills, and Hollywood, as well as Pasadena, all felt the shocks, but appeared to have escaped loss of life and severe damage.

The quake's main force was exerted, it seemed, along the Santa Ana river, which the early Spanish conquerers knew as "The River of the Sweetest Name of Jesus of the Earthquakes." In 1773 there was a severe quake felt by the Spaniards.

At San Diego, the Point Lomas seismographical station asserted that the quake was the severest ever recorded there. The Imperial valley from Brawley at the north to the Mexican border felt the shocks, but suffered no great damage. Calexico and Tia Juana residents all reported feeling the temblors.

Gov. James Rolph of California announced he was considering the declaration of a state of emergency, while in Washington President Roosevelt drafted a message extending to the governor any aid that could be rendered. The Red Cross at midnight was preparing to lend assistance.

At Malibu Beach, home of many motion picture stars, damage was not great. Hundreds of Japanese living on Terminal island, between San Pedro and Long Beach, fled in fear that a tidal wave would come and engulf them, their families, and their homes. They climbed into the foothills and camped.

California's Earthquake Record

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—(AP)—The following chronology of the more important earthquakes recorded in southern California is taken from the records of the Seismological Society of America:

1790—Owens valley; Indian tradition records a major earthquake classed as "extreme intensity."

1812, September-December—Coast region, southern California: Serious damage to buildings and loss of life at San Juan Capistrano and Santa Ynez; destruction at San Fernando and San Gabriel; seismic sea wave at Refugio and damage to ship 38 miles from Santa Barbara. Multitude of aftershocks with continuous vibrations of the ground at Santa Barbara for eight days.

1830—San Luis Obispo; church damaged.

1852, Oct. 26—Southern California; eleven shocks in Los Angeles, San Gabriel, San Simeon, San Luis Obispo, San Diego.

1852—Nov. 27-30—Southern California; continued shocks over area of 300 miles which opened fissures 30 miles long in Lockwood valley.

1857, Jan. 8-9—San Francisco to Fort Yuba; severe at San Gabriel, San Diego, and San Bernardino; large fissure main western part of town.

1893, April 8-9—District around Newhall, north of Los Angeles; shock of extreme intensity.

1906, April 18—San Diego, Brawley, Yuma; shock of extreme intensity, doing considerable damage. Same time as San Francisco shock.

1915, June 22—Imperial valley; $900,000 damage at El Centro and other points.

1918, April 21—San Jacinto-Hemet; buildings destroyed more or less severely; active from Imperial valley to San Diego and Los Angeles.

1926, June 29—Santa Barbara; 11 lives lost; $10,000,000 damage.

2-STORY HOUSE ROCKS LIKE TREE IN WINDSTORM

San Diego, Cal., March 10.—(AP)—Frank Seifert, who drove through the area most severely hit by the quake en route to his home here from Los Angeles, tonight described the terrible scene.

"I was driving through Compton when the quake hit," he said. "I thought a front wheel had fallen off my car. I saw a two story frame house rocking like a tree in the wind and then I saw it fall. I could see faces in the upper windows.

"In Long Beach all the buildings along Anaheim boulevard [the principal thoroughfare] were either down or had walls that had fallen into the streets. The big buildings in Long Beach, such as the Breakers hotel, were cracked but had not collapsed. There were two fires burning in the Signal Hill oil field and one in the Redondo Beach oil field when I drove by.

"I had to try four roads before I found one that was passable to Santa Ana. There the scene was the same. The damage extended to Laguna Beach, which is about halfway between Los Angeles and San Diego. The paved highways were cracked. Abutments on all the new concrete bridges along the route were damaged, many of them were raised at least a foot, and some of the bridges were barely passable."

AVIATOR TELLS OF RUINS, FIRES IN QUAKE AREA

Kansas City, Mo., March 10.—(AP)—Radio reports received over the Transcontinental and Western Air short wave station here tonight told of widespread ruins and fires in the Los Angeles vicinity as viewed from the air by Pilot Jimmie James.

Fires, some of them oil storage tanks, were sighted at Los Angeles, San Pedro, Long Beach, and Wilmington.

INQUIRIES FOR QUAKE INFORMATION SWAMP THE TRIBUNE'S BOARD

Within a few minutes after the first news of the California earthquake was put on the air last night by THE TRIBUNE radio station, W-G-N, the newspaper telephone switchboard was swamped with calls from persons asking information about relatives in the quake area. Early information was meager concerning the identities of victims. There were no reports of Chicagoans killed or injured.

Many Chicagoans at Pasadena telephoned relatives here to report their safety. Pasadena, a favorite winter resort for Chicago families, felt the quake only slightly. This was also true of three other resorts where many Chicagoans are spending the winter, Santa Barbara, Coronado Beach, and San Diego.

Shortly after news of the disaster was announced here George M. Reynolds, former Chicago banker, 1444 Lake Shore drive, called THE TRIBUNE and said he had received a telephone call from friends in Pasadena who reported they had felt "only a slight tremor" and that no one was hurt.

Catalina island, where the Chicago Cubs baseball team is in training, was not shaken, according to Philip K. Wrigley, who talked with members of the team by long distance phone.

YOU RUN, DUCK YOUR HEAD WHEN HOUSES CRASH

Witness Says Everything Seems to Shimmy.

In another minute the calls are swamping every one. They come in hundreds. Pasadena makes it known that nothing bad has happened there. The silence from Long Beach and San Pedro stretches out while the newspaper observers dash out and scurry around the business district to note what damage has happened.

"Come and look at the city hall tower," one yells. You look. Maybe it's imaginary, but even in the lesser intensity of the second and third shocks you fancy you see that tower doing a grave and bacchanalian movement, 428 feet aloft. Later you learn you were right. The city engineers tell grimly how it swayed up there.

"Virtually every room in the city hall will need repair," you hear. "Plaster fallen, wall cracked."

But Tower Is Stanch.

But the old tower is stanch. She has to be; she was guaranteed earthquake proof when they built her after the scare of the Santa Barbara destruction of 1925. In fact, the city hall is the only building in the city of Los Angeles that the building commissioners would permit to rise above the ordinance limit of 150 feet—ordinarily twelve or thirteen stories. They built the tower as high as it is when engineers and contractors felt sure they had tremor proof plans.

The phone calls begin to tinkle from surrounding points.

"Bad down here at the harbor," you hear. That's Redondo calling. Redondo is 15 miles north of San Pedro and removed by a huge, rocky peninsula. Still no word from San Pedro. But a call filters through from Long Beach. It's a youth there with a short wave radio set appealing for outside help for his neighbors.

Entire Street in Ruins.

"An entire street is in ruins," he says. "Police say there may be two hundred dead."

Then you begin to realize you really are in earthquake territory.

As the shocks continue and the reports of burning oil fields, demolished police stations, and collapsed buildings multiply—chiefly in the harbor section, you realize it was a bad one.

You try to drive around and see for yourself. Everywhere you go traffic is rerouted.

Search Ruins for Bodies.

"Building condemned, can't go by there," the police say at 5th and Spring streets, heart of the financial center.

"Building fallen in, they're searching the ruins for bodies; wish we had a doctor around here," they say down along Compton avenue where Compton's city hall and half the bigger buildings of this southeast city limits suburb seem to have collapsed.

Compton proves to be as far along the road to Long Beach as you can get; you try for San Pedro, and the whizzing cars of policemen, the Legionnaires hastily recruited for another emergency, the special ambulances, closing your way and they post guards to rope off the area.

Another severe one at 9:24 p. m. I hope you're keeping track of the tremors and the times, I have lost count. They say this Los Angeles Times building was built with the idea of being safe against quakes. All I can say is: I hope so.

RUSH NUDE TO STREET

BY ROSALIND SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—In a reducing clinic on Wilshire boulevard I was able to observe how feminine Hollywood reacts.

Girls, nearly a dozen in various stages of undress, some of them really Godivas just out of their electric light baths, made a mad rush for the street. One plump beauty in a red swimming suit skidded down the length of the front stairway in her fright. Another fainted. But as is the case with stucco structures, the walls of the place swayed and no damage was done.

Dr. R. R. Davis, in charge, kept the nurses and most of the patients from rushing outdoors, where the danger from falling tiles and flying bricks was real.

Traffic signals all over Hollywood were out of commission; fire trucks and ambulances with screaming sirens added to the hubbub. Hillside dwellers shivered and hoped the underpinning of their mountain eyries would hold. Dangers of avalanche make the steep hills in Hollywood unpleasant places to drive through.

A Hollywood actor, calling up excitedly, was describing the consternation around his house when another quake hit his place and with a yell like Tarzan he dropped the phone and fled.

QUAKE IN HOLLYWOOD

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., March 10. — [Special.]—Hollywood had its uproar when the quake hit the business section. Standing at Hollywood boulevard and Vine street, center of the café and shopping district, the newly erected Hollywood skyscrapers swayed like trees in the wind, with telegraph poles bending like fish poles.

From every doorway, from fire escapes, from street cars, shrieking and milling people rushed forth into the already full and excited streets.

The temporary failure of electric lights left traffic signals useless, with cars swaying here and there in the hands of badly frightened drivers.

The heavy plate glass in the windows of the bank building on the corner buckled and broke with a noise like gunfire, adding further panic to the crowds in the streets. Lights in the shops went out, making further panic.

I was in a store at the main intersection on the Hollywood boulevard when the first shake occurred. The lights went out, there was a crash of plate glass out of an eight story bank building across the street, and the floor began to roll. I covered two hundred yards i. ten flat to reach the wide open spaces of a parking lot. I am sleeping tonight with my parachute strapped on.

CITES QUAKES OF CENTURIES FOR CALIFORNIA

Warning to Architects in 1925 Is Recalled.

Los Angeles, March 10.—(AP)—Warning to southern California architects and engineers that they should prepare for strong earthquakes was sounded in August, 1925, by Harry O. Wood, research associate in seismology of the Carnegie institution of Washington, and vice president of the Seismological Society of America. That was recalled tonight.

Wood's warning was issued shortly after the Santa Barbara earthquake of June, 1925. He pointed out that the total energy of the Santa Barbara tremor, which took eleven lives and caused damage to the extent of $10,000,000, was small. The damage was due chiefly, though not wholly, he said, to poor or unsuitable buildings.

Recalls Long Series of Quakes.

"In the century and a half since California has been occupied by Europeans many shocks as strong, if not so destructive, as the Santa Barbara earthquake have occurred and in southern California alone there have been two or three major shocks," Wood said.

In 1769 a shock strong enough to terrify Indians and members of the Portola expedition in camp near the site of Santa Ana, 36 miles from Los Angeles, was recorded. In the late autumn of 1812, a destructive shock, or perhaps two or more, Wood said, destroyed missions at Purissima, at San Juan Capistrano, at Santa Ynez, and at Santa Barbara and caused severe damage at the missions of San Buenaventure, San Fernando, and San Gabriel.

Strong Quake in 1857.

In 1857, Wood said, much of south central and southern California was shaken by a great earthquake, "probably the strongest that has occurred in the coast range region since the coming of the white men."

"It is reasonable," Wood said, "to look upon shocks like those of 1812 and 1856 and probably 1769 also, as relieving shocks; that is, shocks due to great widespread rock strain gradually accumulated during a long time which finally is relieved. . . . Strong local shocks which precede such greater shocks may reasonably be viewed as evidence of strain thus accumulated and not yet relieved."

From 1860 on, there were few earthquakes in southern California for many years. "However," Wood added, "the forces which build mountains and thus cause earthquakes still are active in this region."

Coast and geodetic survey reports, he explained, show that certain points in the Santa Ynez ranges are now more than 20 feet north of the positions they occupied 30 to 40 years ago.

Wide Area of Strain.

"Also, beginning in 1915," Wood said, "a considerable number of local strong shocks have occurred here. Their distribution points to widespread regional strain. To cite them—in 1915, one in the vicinity of Los Alamos and one in the Imperial valley; in 1916, one in the vicinity of Tejon pass; in 1917, two in the Santa Barbara channel; in 1918, one in the vicinity of San Jacinto and Hemet; in 1920, one at Inglewood, near Los Angeles, and a lesser one in the midst of Los Angeles; in 1922, one in the sparsely settled Cholame valley; in 1923, one near San Bernardino and Redlands, and in 1925 at Santa Barbara."

Wood pointed out at the time that these series of shocks "may bring about relief of the widespread regional strain they indicate so surely, without bringing a great shock in their train."

"Certainly," he added, "this is to be hoped for. But it cannot be said to be probable. It is not the usual way of occurrence of earthquakes in lands subject to frequent shocks."

Predicts Greater Shocks.

"Seismologists," Wood concluded, "cannot make definite predictions; but it is surely the wiser conclusion to expect in southern California the continued occurrence of local strong earthquakes until the regional rock strain finds relief through the occurrence of a general strong shock, after which a term of relative immunity may be expected.

"Even if no great earthquake occurs as the climax of the series, the happening of local strong shocks is inevitable as long as rock strain is unrelieved. So in any case, it is obvious that it is the part of wisdom, here and in other lands subject to earthquakes, to take all reasonable precautions against disaster from strong shocks, and to urge upon the public the unceasing support of this policy. . . . This being so, no reasonable effort should be spared to make buildings safe in earthquakes—especially public and semi-public buildings, such as schools, churches, hospitals, and in general places of public assembly."

Browne and her three small children, of 8211 Langley avenue, were shaken and frightened by the quake at Beverly Hills, Cal., according to a telephone message received late last night by her husband, president of the South Shore Sheet Metal works. CARRYING VICTIMS OF QUAKE INTO HOSPITAL

Scene at Long Beach, Cal., last night as sailors from the U. S. fleet were carrying victims of earthquake into hospital. Long Beach was hardest hit of any of the cities in southern California. [Acme Telephoto.]

Incidents During Earthquake

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—The first earthquake which, according to the Carnegie institution seismeological laboratory at Pasadena occurred at 54 minutes and 20 seconds past 5 o'clock, was of sufficient force to bowl over the engineer in the boilerroom of Los Angeles city hall.

The airplane beacon on top of the city hall was thrown out of position, but Albert Martin, the city hall's construction engineer, declared the damage suffered by that edifice was only minor. Martin said: "There isn't a leak or a light wire disarranged and the elevators still are running.

"All colored help in the building, janitors, porters, and the like, left the building at the first shock and I have not seen any of them since."

San Pedro, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—Hundreds of Japanese men, women, and children who reside permanently in the Terminal island fishing village here left the island deserted tonight. They said they feared a tidal wave. With a hastily gathered layout of household goods, blankets, and clothing they pitched camp in the hills above San Pedro.

San Pedro, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—Soldiers from Fort MacArthur joined in the relief going to aid of stricken Long Beach tonight. The California of the fleet battleship was ordered to stand off Long Beach and lower boats to land sailors to help in policing and relief work.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—The city's big steel water tank at Manchester and Western avenues, containing 5,000,000 gallons, sprung a leak during one of the tremors, and lost all its contents in a flood which added to the neighborhood complications of the quake.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—Two physicians, Dr. A. A. Ehrke and Dr. Lynn, were among the quake victims removed to Calas Campanas hospital for emergency treatment after the collapse of a building in Compton. Although suffering from severe injuries, they aided the hospital staff, Dr. Lynn collapsed. He was found to have worked at surgery more than an hour, although he had a skull fracture. Dr. Ehrke also collapsed.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—Ivor Williams' plan to end his life quickly with a bullet into his heart miscarried momentarily when this evening's first earthquake shock disturbed his aim to such an extent that the bullet lodged in a lung.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—Although schedules were maintained tonight on main lines of the Southern Pacific railroad officials reported trains were slowed down in order to allow inspectors to ride ahead of each engine to examine tracks and tunnels. No damage was reported to company property.

'SORRY, WE'RE HAVING AN EARTHQUAKE,' SAYS TELEPHONE OPERATOR

New York, March 10.—[Special.]—Simultaneously with the arrival of the telegraphic news flashes reporting the California earthquake a woman, who would not give her name, called the news department of the New York Times.

"You might be interested," she said, "in knowing that I have just tried to communicate with Los Angeles by telephone. When I had made connection with the Los Angeles operator the girl's voice, calm and unhurried, came over the wire:

"'Sorry; I cannot connect you. We're having an earthquake.'"

HORNER OFFERS AID OF ILLINOIS TO QUAKE VICTIMS

A message offering immediate aid, medical and otherwise, to stricken Californians, was sent by wire last night by Gov. Henry Horner to Gov. James Rolph of California. The message reads:

"The hearts of Illinoisans beat in earnest sympathy for the sufferers in California's earthquake catastrophe. Illinois is ready to aid in the emergency in any manner possible. How can we be of service? Our airplanes are ready to forward to you medical supplies or whatever else is within our power to send. HENRY HORNER,
"Governor of Illinois."

ROOSEVELT SAYS U. S. WILL HELP QUAKE VICTIMS

Washington, D. C., March 10.—(AP)—President Roosevelt tonight extended the facilities of the government to Gov. Rolph of California, to relieve distress in the path of the earthquake.

After being up every night this week holding conferences on the banking emergencies, the chief executive had retired before news of the quake reached here. His aids awakened him as reports of destruction mounted.

Stephen T. Early, the President's secretary, gave the Associated Press the following message from Mr. Roosevelt to Gov. Rolph and asked that a reply be transmitted to him:

"News dispatches report serious catastrophe in Los Angeles area. Wires are down and cannot get any confirmation. If there is anything needed that the government can do, wire me at once. Trust preliminary reports are exaggerated. Will be glad to be kept in touch with situation."

Red Cross headquarters awaited word from regional headquarters at San Francisco before swinging its huge resources into action to relieve distress.

The assistance of the United States fleet, whose battleships are lying off San Pedro, was asked and extended, Admiral Richard H. Leigh, the commander, informed the navy department by radio tonight.

His message was brief, reporting there had been an earthquake, the damage of which had not been determined.

The form of assistance usually taken by the navy is in rescue work and police duty by the men, giving medical assistance and other aid.

LOOP BANKS FILE FORMAL PLEAS FOR REOPENING

Horner Extends Illinois Holiday.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Chicago banks will reopen Monday, according to the consensus in banking circles last night. This opinion prevailed after banks had received through the federal reserve bank Secretary of the Treasury Woodin's order postponing openings of banks under the emergency banking act until Monday.

Shortly before midnight Gov. Horner issued a proclamation extending the state bank holiday through Sunday night in order that state banks might keep in step with national banks.

File Pleas for Reopening.

Earlier yesterday, after receiving word from Washington that Secretary Woodin had invited application for reopening upon expiration of the national holiday, Chicago banks rushed their petitions to the federal reserve. The latter transmitted them immediately to Washington for approval.

Heading the list of applicants were the big loop institutions: The First National bank, the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, the Northern Trust company, the Harris Trust and Savings bank, and the City National Bank and Trust company.

May Announce Complete List.

A number of smaller downtown institutions and outlying banks were reported also to have asked Washington for authorization to reopen. At the federal reserve bank the word was given out that a complete list of applicants might be announced later.

All national banks are members of the federal reserve system, in accordance with the legal requirements. Of the 59 state and national banks in Chicago 15 are now federal reserve members. State banks in Cook county which are members of the system are: Drexel State, Harris Trust and Savings, Northern Trust, Security Bank of Chicago, Evanston Trust and Savings, State Bank and Trust company of Evanston, First State Bank of Matteson, Oak Park Trust and Savings, Suburban Trust and Savings of Oak Park, Wilmette State, and Mercantile Trust and Savings.

Seek Reserve Membership.

Meanwhile, there was a scramble all over the middle west for federal reserve memberships on the part of state banks. Ten Chicago banks and at least sixteen other institutions in the seventh federal reserve district had formally applied for membership before the records were closed for the day.

A canvass revealed that the following Chicago banks had asked for membership in the reserve system yesterday: Lake Shore Trust and Savings bank, Liberty Bank of Chicago, Amalgamated Trust and Savings bank, Chicago City Bank and Trust company, Lake View Trust and Savings bank Merchandise Bank and Trust company Upper Avenue bank, Uptown State bank, Mid-City Trust and Savings bank, and Boulevard Bridge bank.

Other nonmember banks were holding meetings last night to decide upon application for membership.

Ordinarily, two or three weeks is required for a bank to become a member. This process, however, is being greatly speeded up for the present and reserve officials expect that applications entered yesterday or today will be acted upon in time so that banks obtaining new memberships may be ready to reopen backed by the full strength of the reserve system early next week.

Problem of State Banks.

The chief problem yesterday continued to be the status of state banks not belonging to the federal reserve system. Under the terms of the instructions sent out by the secretary of the treasury yesterday, the reopening of these institutions, which have no direct hookup with the federal authorities, is left to the state banking authority—in Illinois the state auditor—because the federal authorities have no adequate records of non-member state banks.

Gov. Horner, State Auditor Edward J. Barrett and Attorney General Otto Kerner will confer today on arrangements for the reopening of state banks. It was reported that there is under consideration a plan by which state banks not belonging to the reserve system may be opened under 5 per cent withdrawal restrictions for 20 to 30 days, pending examination by the state auditor.

Many of these non-member banks are known to be in excellent financial condition and entirely able to meet any demands without the additional assistance offered by the reserve banks under the terms of the new banking legislation.

While the applications for membership in the federal reserve system were coming in, the vaults of the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago were receiving millions of dollars worth of crisp new federal reserve bank notes, the money which will be passed along to the member banks who ask for cash and put up qualified securities as collateral.

Although federal reserve officials would make no comment, it was reliably reported that several shipments of this money were received during the day.

Gov. Horner in his proclamation last night directed that no bank or trust company be opened for business prior to Monday.

"It is expected," said the proclamation, "that the state auditor will formulate provisions regarding the terms and conditions of the opening and conduct of the state banks and trust companies, and that such terms and conditions will be announced by him prior to March 13 unless an extension of the holiday, because of national action, shall be proclaimed."

IF YOUR BANK DELAYS OPENING DON'T WORRY, F. D. ROOSEVELT URGES

Washington, March 10. — (AP) — If your particular bank does not open next Monday or Tuesday, President Roosevelt says you should not become concerned.

He carefully explained this point today to newspaper men, urging that people be reassured. His plan is that banks shall open gradually. In some instances it may take some time to establish in detail the condition of a bank and if they are not opened early in the week it does not mean, said the President, that they will not be opened later.

Only those banks whose soundness and solvency are definitely established will be permitted to reopen. In cities where there are clearing house organizations a much quicker check of the condition is possible than in other communities.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Talks at Memorial House

New York, March 10.—(AP)—At Roosevelt house, a memorial to her husband, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt spoke briefly today at the presentation of Roosevelt honor medallions to 400 boys and girls of New York City. The widow of the former President stressed the need of character building in youth, saying that while scholarship and intelligence are of great importance they are secondary to character and honor.

FIRST BANKS TO REOPEN MONDAY, U. S. ANNOUNCES

New Currency Rushed Out to Reserve Group.

some banks might be able to reopen tomorrow, the federal reserve board notified federal reserve banks tonight to permit no member banks to resume until Monday because of the physical difficulties of the procedure involved.

Reopening Badge of Soundness.

National banks and state banks in the federal reserve system that reopen will do so with the imprimatur of the treasury department that they are solvent and state banks outside the system that reopen will do so with the certification of the state banking commissioner that they are solvent, which certification will be accepted by the treasury.

Because, however, a bank does not reopen on Monday or even next week will not be evidence that the institution is insolvent. Banks, whether in or out of the federal reserve system, that have not been examined for some time, must be examined now in order to determine whether they are sound. To make these examinations will require a week or more.

"The reopening of the banking of the country is not to be accomplished in a few hours," said Secretary Woodin. "In general, the process will be that the secretary of the treasury will receive through the federal reserve banks applications for reopening by banks which are members of the federal reserve system. These applications will be acted on forthwith. In the case of the state banks it is provided that applications will be made to the proper state authorities.

Must Proceed Carefully.

"The matter cannot be rushed because we must insure that there are no mistakes made and that banks when reopened must be capable of remaining open. Certain physical difficulties must be overcome; the most important of these is the necessity of getting the new currency available to the banks.

"Under the orders of the secretary of the treasury the banks have authority to disburse amounts required for such necessities as medicine and food, and for taking care of pay rolls and the maintenance of employment.

"Under the circumstances, it is obviously not possible to state now just when the banking machinery will be operating again at full speed, but it is certain that this will be a matter of only a few days at the furthest."

Reserve Banks Get Money.

Treasury officials said that by Monday morning the 12 federal reserve banks will be in receipt of an ample supply of the new currency to be issued to member banks upon the security of their liquid assets. "Plenty" was the only answer officials would give when asked how great a volume of the asset money could be pumped into the banks under the new law. They will be open tomorrow to distribute the money to qualifying banks.

With 21 billion dollars' worth of government securities outstanding, together with untold billions in "liquid assets," all of which is now eligible collateral, the sky is the limit, unofficial estimates reveal. New grist to the money mill will be added soon when the treasury announces its regular March 15 borrowing program. A billion dollars or more may have to be borrowed for ordinary needs, and at least half of it will furnish a new collateral for asset currency.

The President's executive order authorizes the secretary of the treasury to permit the reopening of banks in the federal reserve system and authorizes state banking authorities to permit the reopening of state banks outside the federal reserve system "to perform any or all of their usual banking functions" with certain exceptions.

Gold Embargo Continues.

The exceptions pertain to the conservation of the gold supply. No bank is to export gold or pay out gold except as authorized by the secretary of the treasury. No bank is to allow withdrawals of deposits for hoarding or to deal in foreign exchange except "for legitimate and normal business requirements," for reasonable traveling requirements and fulfillment of contracts entered into prior to March 6.

The order prescribes that any bank in the federal reserve system desiring to reopen shall apply to the secretary of the treasury for a license through the federal reserve bank of its district. If the bank is found sound, the reserve bank will issue a license with the approval of the secretary of the treasury.

In this manner the reopening of the banks has been decentralized. The reserve bank in each district will determine which member banks are sound and will permit them to resume, the treasury's approval being only a formality.

Announcement of the banks allowed to reopen is to be made by the federal reserve bank in each of the 12 districts. The application of member banks to reopen are to be passed on in the order they are received.

No Withdrawal Restrictions.

There is to be no restrictions on the withdrawal of deposits from the banks that reopen. In states which have applied such restrictions it is understood that they will be relaxed to conform with the President's order relaxing the national banking holiday.

The understanding also is that state banking authorities will follow the same procedure as the treasury in examining banks under their jurisdiction, determining which are sound and fit to reopen and lifting restrictions on withdrawal of deposits.

Clearing houses will aid federal and state authorities in checking up on the condition of banks. Where there is no clearing house association an examiner will be assigned to the check-up.

The twelve regional reserve banks will be open tomorrow preparing for the issue of the new currency to member banks and also furnishing funds for pay rolls, food, medicines, and other necessities of life under the terms of treasury order No. 10. Under the order banks that are closed to general business are permitted to allow withdrawals of deposits by employers for pay rolls and by any depositor for emergency personal needs.

State banks are joining the federal reserve system in large numbers, according to treasury advices, in order to avail themselves of the privileges accorded by the new legislation and to obtain the standing of banks pronounced sound by the federal government directly.

State Banks Protest.

Floods of mail are pouring into the treasury from state banks protesting the new bank bill as a measure designed to force them into a national banking system. The state banks are claiming that unless they become members of the reserve system they cannot quickly share the benefits of the new act and thus are put at a disadvantage.

Two ways are open under the new law to state banks in need of help. They may obtain loans from reserve banks on the basis of government securities or sell their stock with the approval of the secretary of the treasury to the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

To resort to either of these methods will means delays while federal authorities investigate credit ratings, the state banks say, whereas national banks or state banks that are members of the reserve system can obtain loans quickly.

Treasury Answers Argument.

Treasury officials are pointing out in answer that state banks necessarily cannot be handled in the same manner as banks under national authority because of constitutional barriers. If there is a premium under present conditions on national baking status it is inherent in the situation, they say.

State banks, moreover, may reopen on a restricted basis, although the secretary of the treasury is urging that such action be not taken. Banks under national supervision, however, will not be allowed to reopen unless they reopen on a 100 per cent basis.

In a telegram to state superintendents of banks Secretary Woodin said that he would "permit any sound bank which is a member of the federal reserve system, whether state or national, to reopen for business as promptly as possible."

Early in the evening Secretary Woodin issued an order permitting banks to complete the collection on checks drawn before March 6 by deducting them from the account of the person who drew them and adding them to the account of the person to whom they are payable. The regulation will apply only where the person who is to receive the check has an account in the bank on which the check is drawn or will consent to the setting up of an account in that bank.

Bank Guarantee Bills.

Senator William G. McAdoo [Dem., Cal.] introduced in the senate a bank deposit guarantee bill. He would set up a bank depositors' guarantee fund under the supervision of the federal reserve board. The fund would be supplied from assessments on member banks in proportion to deposits until it amounted to 1 per cent of the aggregate deposits of all member banks. Sums due depositors of insolvent banks are to be paid from the fund.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.] introduced a bill setting up a public corporation to guarantee 75 per cent of the time deposits in federal reserve member banks and such state banks as could qualify as subscribers to a guarantee fund.

The fund would be administered by a corporation whose directors would consist of the membership of the federal reserve board and whose officers would be named by that board. The capitalization of the fund corporation would be indefinite, being erected around an appropriation of 125 million dollars from the United States treasury.

Assessments on Banks.

In addition to that appropriation the corporation would assess federal reserve banks one-fourth of their surplus as of July 1, 1932, of which one-half would be collected on July 1, 1933, and the remainder on call by the corporation. Federal reserve banks thereafter would be assessed one-fourth of their profits available for surplus, these payments to be made on July 1 of each year.

Federal reserve member banks on July 1, 1933, and on July 1 of each year thereafter would be assessed one-eighth of one per cent of their average time deposits for the last year. State banks, not members of the reserve system could take advantage of the guarantee fund by payment of annual assessments at a rate at least double that applied to member banks.

The 75 per cent payments on guaranteed deposits would be made within 30 days after the bank was closed, either by its officers or by the authorities.

Presidential Bank Order

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—A banking proclamation issued today by President Roosevelt, under authority of legislation passed by congress yesterday, follows:

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by section 5 [B] of the act of Oct. 6, 1917 [40 Stat. L. 411], as amended by the act of March 9, 1933, and by virtue of all other executive authority vested in me, I hereby issue the following executive order.

"The secretary of the treasury is authorized and empowered under such regulations as he may prescribe to permit any member bank of the federal reserve system and any other banking institution organized under the laws of the United States, to perform any or all of their usual banking functions, except as otherwise prohibited.

State Banks May Open.

"The appropriate authority having immediate supervision of banking institutions in each state or any place subject to the jurisdiction of the United States is authorized and empowered under such regulations as such authority may prescribe to permit any banking institution in such state or place, other than banking institutions covered by the foregoing paragraph, to perform any or all of their usual banking functions, except as otherwise prohibited.

"All banks which are members of the federal reserve system desiring to reopen for the performance of all usual and normal banking functions, except as otherwise prohibited, shall apply for a license therefor to the secretary of the treasury.

"Such applications shall be filed immediately through the federal reserve banks. The federal reserve bank shall then transmit such applications to the secretary of the treasury.

Banking Licenses Issued.

"Licenses will be issued by the federal reserve bank upon approval of the secretary of the treasury. The federal reserve banks are hereby designated as agents of the secretary of the treasury for the receiving of application and the issuance of licenses in his behalf and upon his instructions.

"Until further order, no individual, partnership, association, or corporation, including any banking institution, shall export or otherwise remove or permit to be withdrawn from the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof any gold coin, gold bullion, or gold certificates, except in accordance with regulations prescribed by or under license issued by the secretary of the treasury.

Gold Restrictions Continue.

"No permission to any banking institution to perform any banking functions shall authorize such institution to pay out any gold coin, gold bullion or gold certificates except as authorized by the secretary of the treasury, nor to allow withdrawal of any currency for hoarding, nor to engage in any transaction in foreign exchange except such as may be undertaken for legitimate and normal business requirements, for reasonable traveling and other personal requirements, and for the fulfillment of contracts entered into prior to March 6, 1933.

"Every federal reserve bank is authorized and instructed to keep itself currently informed as to transactions in foreign exchange entered into or consummated within its district and shall report to the secretary of the treasury all transactions in foreign exchange which are prohibited."

ORDERS BY WOODIN TO GOVERN OPENING OF THE STATE BANKS

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—Secretary of the Treasury Woodin today issued the following regulations concerning the reopening of state banks:

"All banks of the country are now prohibited under the proclamation of March 9 of the President from conducting any banking business, except as specifically authorized by rule, regulation or license of the secretary of the treasury issued under that proclamation.

"In view of the passage of the emergency bank bill by congress yesterday, and under the terms of that bill, and section 5 of the act of Oct. 6, 1917, as amended by that bill, the secretary of the treasury will be authorized to permit any sound bank which is a member of the federal reserve system, whether state or national, to reopen for business as promptly as possible.

"It is the intention of the secretary of the treasury, however, to permit no member bank to reopen at any time on a full 100 per cent basis unless or until the secretary is satisfied that such bank is a sound going institution. Any member bank not clearly within this category will not be opened unless or until further investigation discloses that it is a sound going institution, or unless or until a reorganization of some character will permit the bank to be classified as a sound going institution.

"Any member bank not opened 100 per cent under this procedure will be permitted to continue to perform only such specific transactions as are now authorized or may hereafter be authorized by specific regulation or license of the secretary of the treasury.

"In view of the fact that neither the treasury nor the federal reserve authorities have sufficient information upon which to consider applications for reopening by such state banks as are not members of the federal reserve system, the President will by decree authorize the appropriate state authorities in each state to give licenses to banks under their jurisdiction other than members of the federal reserve system to open for the usual normal business, or in their judgment, and under the terms of the presidential proclamation, to permit of such reopening under such restrictions and limitations as they in their judgment may deem wise.

"It is to be expected, however, that state superintendents in granting licenses under this authority will take under consideration in determining their own policy the general principle to be adopted by the treasury as respects member banks that in the interest of depositors and of the country as a whole, only sound institutions will be permitted to carry on all of their usual functions to the end that no bank shall be reopened for business on any basis that will run the risk of being forced to close again because of demands which it is not in a position to satisfy."

BUYING IS ACTIVE IN N. Y. STORES; CRISIS IS PAST

New York, March 10.—[Special.]—Expressing the view that the peak of the banking crisis in its effect upon retail trade apparently had been passed, store executives reported active buying today.

Fortified by payments on pay roll checks and the disbursements by savings banks for necessities, the public was described as being in "much more of a buying mood" than at any time since the moratorium was declared.

A total of several million dollars in merchandise will be offered by metropolitan stores in anniversary or other sales events beginning tomorrow and continuing through next week. They are being announced in a large volume of newspaper advertising.

FATHER OF FIVE SHOT TO DEATH IN AUTOMOBILE

Samuel La Rocca, 32 years old, father of five small children, was shot to death by one of a gang of assassins in front of 1228 Larrabee street last night. He was a fruit peddler.

A seven year old boy, Albert Quilici, 1231 Larrabee street, was the only witness. He told police that La Rocca's sedan was forced to the curb by another car containing several men. One of these men, the boy related, alighted from the pursuing automobile and fired several shots at La Rocca.

La Rocca was hit five times. Four of the bullets lodged in the right side, neck, and shoulder. Police identified the victim through his automobile license card and called his widow who verified his identity. She knew of no reason for his murder, she said.

ZANGARA GIVEN DEATH PENALTY BY MIAMI JUDGE

Assassin Rages in Court When He Learns Fate.

Miami, Fla., March 10.—[Special.]—Giuseppe Zangara must die in the electric chair for the assassination of Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago. The death sentence was pronounced upon him here today at the hour when thousands of Chicagoans had gathered at a civic funeral for their slain leader.

The little anarchist who inflicted a fatal wound upon the mayor and shot four other persons on Feb. 15 in a vain attempt to kill Franklin D. Roosevelt, then President elect, vented a wild outburst of defiance upon Circuit Judge Uly O. Thompson after the judge had condemned him to death.

"You're one of the capitalists," shouted Zangara. "I'm no afraid of that chair. You're crook man. Put me in electric chair."

Then deputy sheriffs led him back to his cell.

Date Up to Governor.

Under Florida law the trial judge does not set the date of execution. The governor sets a week in which the execution shall take place, and the state prison superintendent fixes the day and hour. Executions take place at the state prison farm at Raiford, in northern Florida.

Zangara pleaded guilty yesterday to the murder of Mayor Cermak, who died of his wound Monday in the Jackson Memorial hospital here. Previously he had pleaded guilty to an attempt upon the life of Mr. Roosevelt, and to shooting three other persons.

For those crimes Judge Thompson sentenced him to 80 years in prison. The three whom he was charged with shooting received minor wounds. They were Russell Caldwell of Coconut Grove, Fla.; Miss Margaret Kruis, Newark, N. J., and William Sinnott, New York policeman.

Mrs. Gill's Condition Grave.

Zangara also shot Mrs. Joe H. Gill, local society woman and wife of a public utility president, in the abdomen. Mrs. Gill is still in a critical condition in a hospital here, but her physicians believe she will recover.

Zangara, an immigrant from Italy, worked for several years as a bricklayer in Hackensack, N. J. He said his desire to "kill all presidents and kings" is the result of stomach trouble.

Zangara was examined by alienists and pronounced sane before he was given his first prison sentences. The three attorneys who defended him today said that they doubt that any appeal will be taken from the death sentence.

Before he pronounced sentence, Judge Thompson made a statement from the bench recommending enactment by congress of an anti-firearms law.

Joseph B. Kleckner, Loop Broker, Kidnaped, Robbed

Joseph B. Kleckner, 6736 Merrill avenue, head of an investment firm bearing his name at 105 West Adams street, was kidnaped in his own car by two bandits in front of 6537 Woodlawn avenue last night. They drove him to 67th street and St. Lawrence avenue while a man and a woman, confederates, followed in another car. Then they ejected Kleckner from his automobile, after taking $4 and a watch.

176 Evanston Employes Get Week's Pay in Cash

The city of Evanston yesterday paid 176 city laborers and part time workers, whose need was considered the most urgent of all the city's employés, their week's salaries in cash. The pay roll, amounting to $7,419, was loaned to the city by Henry D. Penfield, township tax collector, out of his own fee collections.

Horner to Push Legislation for Election of Acting Mayor

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Gov. Henry Horner announced last night that he would sponsor emergency measures at Springfield, if Chicago wishes, to empower the city council to elect an acting mayor from either inside or outside its own body and to clothe him with full powers as mayor. The announcement followed a conference between the governor, County Democratic Chairman Pat Nash, Edward J. Kelly, head of the south parks; Edward J. Hughes, secretary of state; Al J. Horan, Municipal court bailiff, and Committeeman Moe Rosenberg.

By empowering the aldermen to select an "outsider" as mayor pro tem, the Democratic view is that it would enable the selection of the strongest available man to fill Mayor Cermak's vacant chair until a special election can be held. The Democrats favor holding a special election of a mayor to fill the rest of the unexpired term, June 5, at the time of the judicial elections.

Question of Authority.

The governor's statement read: "I will propose legislation to give the city council the broadest field of selection of a mayor pro tem if that is Chicago's wish. The members of both parties with whom I have consulted think that legislation should be enacted to resolve any doubt which might arise as to the authority of a mayor pro tem.

"If it is decided that there should be a city-wide election to fill the unexpired term, I feel it should be held coincident with another election in the interests of economy."

One suggestion tentatively thrown out at the conference was whether an amendment to the law should be sought at Springfield that would permit the city council to select a successor to Mayor Cermak who would serve out the entire remainder of the term, which expires in 1935. This is to be taken under consideration by members of both parties and will also be weighed by civic leaders.

List of Candidates.

Among possibilities for acting mayor, in case the council is given power to pick from a wide field, prominently mentioned in the gossip last evening after Mayor Cermak's funeral were Chairman Nash, William H. Sexton, corporation counsel; Edward J. Kelly, head of the south parks; Oscar Hewitt, commissioner of public works, and Col. A. A. Sprague, former commissioner of public works.

Chief among the Democratic aldermanic candidates for acting mayor are Thomas A. Doyle [13th], J. M. Arvey [24th], James B. Bowler [25th], and John S. Clark [30th]. Republicans mentioned are John A. Massen [48th] and Oscar F. Nelson [46th]. The latter is said to have ten or twelve votes in sight.

Meanwhile the Chicago Association of Commerce issued a statement calling for the selection of the strongest possible citizen to take over the helm at the city hall. It was the first political utterance the association has made in its 29 years of existence, and it declared that the sole issue now is not what party or faction a candidate represents, but whether he is qualified by experience and reputation.

The association sounded a note that the financial emergency calls for sacrifice of personal ambitions by men who may be seekers for the vacant place, and that at the city hall the Cermak policies of sustained economy must continue.

"This emergency," says the association's utterance," calls for sacrifice, not only financial sacrifice, but political sacrifice as well. The aspirations of men for the power and the glory of office must give way to civic patriotism. The stake is not the political future of any man. It is the credit — the reputation — the solvency — the future of Chicago.

"Never before the election of 1931 had there been doubt of the availability of funds for the payment of the operating expenses of the city government and the maturing principal and interest of its funded debt. Never before that time had there been doubt that the salaries of the teachers in the public schools would be paid. Upon taking office, Mayor Cermak found confronting him the overwhelming task of operating the city government and the city's schools with an empty treasury and a heritage of debt that was—and is—appalling.

Follows Courageous Course.

"To contend with this situation but one course was open and Mayor Cermak courageously took that course, which involved the adoption of the most severe economies, regardless of their political effect.

"In this, the centennial year of the city's life, when we have asked all the world to visit us and witness the results of the efforts of our fathers and ourselves; when we have put our city upon a pinnacle, to receive, as we hope, the admiration of all the world, we should have at the head of its government that one of our citizens whose capability is greatest, without thought of the effect of his selection upon the political fortunes of any faction, group, or party.

"When such a man is nominated, we shall support him with all our strength, and with equal energy will we oppose a nominee who falls short of the needs of the hour."

Judges Call on Horner; Bill Cuts Their Salaries

A committe of Circuit and Superior court judges called upon Gov. Henry Horner last evening. There is a bill pending in the legislature which would reduce the state's contribution to Cook county's judges' salaries from $8,000 to $6,500. The bill is a part of the economy program introduced by Representative James T. Burns [Dem., Kankakee], who was made chairman of the efficiency and economy committee. It was reported the judges protested against the bill. If the bill receives 102 votes in the house and 34 in the senate, the cut would be in effect immediately.

13 MEN ADRIFT IN NORTH ATLANTIC AT MERCY OF ICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, March 10.—Thirteen men in two small boats, who started seal hunting this morning from Coachman's cove, White bay, are adrift tonight with ice floes, strong winds and static interference with wireless blocking their rescue.

The wind, which was favorable when the men set out, suddenly shifted from the northwest, making their return to shore impossible and leaving them drifting before the storm and ice floes. One boat was seen from high land this afternoon five miles out and drifting toward the western shore of Horse island, which is about 18 miles off the mainland.

There is a wireless station on Horse island, but static interfered with messages. The sealer Ranger, too, might give assistance, but at last reports it was jammed about 20 miles from the marooned men.

SORROWING CITY PAYS TRIBUTE AS MAYOR IS BURIED

Untold Thousands View Funeral March.

BEGIN AT CITY HALL

The third day of rites began at the city hall, which had been a focus for crowds nearly all night. From 10 o'clock Thursday morning, when the casket was opened there, until 7 o'clock yesterday morning, 76,290 had viewed the mayor's body. Still they were not satisfied and thousands were turned away when the casket was closed to prepare for the parade. It was opened at 8 o'clock to permit a death mask to be taken for a Bohemian society, and then was closed for the last march.

Members of the city council, the legislature, pallbearers, officials, and close friends began to gather at the city hall at 8 o'clock. At 9:30 o'clock the little space under the dark canopy became a chapel of remembrance. The members of the family sat in chairs in front of the casket. All those in the corridors grouped around and the Rev. Preston Bradley, pastor of the People's church, read from the 23d Psalm and said a prayer. Soft voices of a choir closed this little service.

Spectators Endure Cold.

In the meantime the streets around the city hall were thick with crowds waiting for the beginning of the parade, which started from La Salle and Jackson streets at 10 o'clock. In the freezing temperature both watchers and marchers had a chilling experience, but everything was carried through despite the cold. The mayor's family watched the passage of the first part of the parade from windows of the city hall, then came out and joined it for the march to the Stadium.

There were more than 30,000 in the parade, which was five miles long. It made a brave sight at the turn into Washington street from the city hall. The sun was shining brightly over the figure of Ceres on the Board of Trade building and under many banners down the cañon of the street came the thousands on foot and on horse, stamping and blowing, drums beating slow time, bands playing Chopin's funeral march, Beethoven's "Pathetique," "Resurrection," "Nearer My God to Thee," and other appropriate music. There were screams from the sidewalks as women were pushed and crowded.

Casket on Army Caisson.

It was to the strains of this last hymn that the flag covered casket was finally brought out of the La Salle street doors at 10:15 o'clock. A caisson of the 124th field artillery was waiting before the door. Riders sat on the horses. The pallbearers and family climbed into automobiles and this procession joined the parade, which went west on Washington boulevard through a wall of faces.

At the head rode the marshals, a police contingent that stretched for two blocks, a battalion of infantry, the 14th cavalry, a company from Great Lakes Naval Training station, the Illinois National Guard Black Horse troop, a battalion of the 132d infantry, the 122d field artillery, and Illinois Naval Reserve. Following this were veterans, pallbearers, the council, county commissioners, state legislators, delegations from dozens of clubs, school bands, and distinguished guests. City Greeter George Gaw led a delegation of 52 silk hatted men representing different nationalities. All the foreign consuls were in this group.

Quiet Pervades Arena.

Driven from the streets by the cold other thousands stood in stores and offices while the parade went by. The elevated platforms were crowded. Around the Stadium another crowd surged hopefully against the doors. By noon all who had admission cards were in their places, filling about one-third of the structure. While they waited the organist, Ralph Waldo Emerson, played religious music. The people sank gratefully into the quiet of the place. A strange quiet pervaded the scene of so many athletic contests and the scene of the political conventions of last summer.

Here, a few feet from where he now lay in his casket, the mayor last summer arose to pledge Illinois to the candidacy of Franklin Roosevelt for President. Now he was dead by a bullet intended for the President.

No chairs were placed in the floor part of the Stadium. This had been converted into a garden, built in the form of a great cross, with walks of white canvas and hedge rows of calla lilies and hyacinths. In the center, surrounded by bushlike stands of flowers, guarded by seven soldiers, the casket rested with the head toward the east.

At the eastern end on a platform draped with black and purple the speakers, members of the family, and guests sat in full view of the audience. The women wept so hard when they came in that they were taken outside to wait until the speaking began.

SERVICES BEGIN AT 1

Among the guests on the platform were Lieut. Col. C. B. Hodges, U. S. A., personal aid of the President; Senators J. Hamilton Lewis and William H. Dieterich; former Mayors Carter H. Harrison and Edward F. Dunne; Postmaster General James A. Farley, John J. Curry, and John McCooey, New York and Brooklyn Democratic chiefs. Members of the city council and the legislature sat to right and left of the platform.

The service began at 1 o'clock, when the Rev. John Thompson, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, walked to the pulpit, draped in black both and flanked by microphones, and read his address on the personality of Mayor Cermak.

"His was a dynamic personality," he said, "loaded with enough dynamite to pulverize all obstacles. His magnetic, dynamic personality dissolved mountains of difficulties. This masterful personality explains his successful career. . . .

"His life ought to be an inspiration to struggling youth everywhere. Born in a foreign land beyond the seas, brought here in childhood, and going to work in the mines, climbing out of poverty through struggle and his own strenuous endeavors, he came to great influence in city and county and state.

Shot Greeting Friend.

When the assassin's bullet laid him low he was greeting as his personal friend the then President elect of this great country. Thus the miner lad climbed up to the topmost circle of influence. The eyes of a nation were turned toward that room in Miami where he battled with an indomitable will and almost superhuman courage for life. The eyes of a nation are turned toward this hall today, where a bereft city gathers to do him honor. The presidency could not be his, having been born in a foreign land and spending his first birthday at Ellis island, but, like Abraham Lincoln, he climbed out of direst poverty to the highest heights possible for him. His record of struggle and triumph should be a stimulus to the youth of this city and state and country through all the coming years."

ROOSEVELT'S MESSAGE

Gov. Henry Horner then read the following telegram sent by President Roosevelt to Mrs. Richey Graham:

"It is a sincere regret to me that the emergency of the present situation makes it impossible for me to leave Washington at this time, as otherwise I should have wanted to pay last tribute to a true friend. Even without the tragic setting of his death, the passing of Anton Cermak would have brought to me a sense of deep loss, and under the circumstances his untimely end came as even a deeper personal loss. I want you to feel that I mourn with his family and dear ones."

Gov. Horner then launched into his eulogy of Mayor Cermak. He sketched the mayor's dramatic career from his arrival as an immigrant baby 59 years ago, his childhood in a small mining town, where he started work in the mines at 11, his coming to Chicago alone and without friends here, his steady progress, his entrance into politics and his long fight there until he became mayor.

Evil Days Fall on City.

He then continued:

"Evil days fell upon the city which he loved so much. Lawlessness and corruption was the general charge of which she was accused. Crime and politics made common cause. They sapped her strength, depleted her treasury and made her a byword among her neighbors. The world began to shun her, and her own citizens became conscious of her shame. Their cry was for a leader capable of assuming the great task of leading her out of despair. A hopeless and almost helpless citizenry rallied under the standard raised by Anton J. Cermak. They elected him as their chief magistrate and entrusted him with a mandate to sweep clean this city and to regain her rightful position among her sister cities of the world."

After telling how the mayor set about this task and how far he had accomplished it the governor said:

"In the presence of his mortal remains, we vow that the work which he began on behalf of our city shall not end by his passing, for no assassin's dart shall stay the course of progress which Cermak's genius has mapped out for Chicago. Our loss is irreparable, but in the light of his spirit we shall continue to strive upward, guided by the policies which he has formulated.

Cermak's Work Goes On.

"The thought that should be uppermost with us at this time is how best we may show that the mourning for our loss is not mere idle form. What would please him best is to know that we, his friends, were to carry on the great civic work he had undertaken, and would have completed if he had been spared to do so.

"His career is emphatic proof that there is no station in public life to which even the humblest among our citizens may not aspire. . . . No power of destruction that death can conjure will ever be strong enough to crush those forces which Anton Cermak set in motion, and which will continue to live as long as recorded history is read by man. Even in destruction and death the spirit of the real hero rises unconquerable."

USES POWER WITH WISDOM

The Hamilton club chorus of 30 voices sang during this and other intermissions. Rabbi Louis L. Mann of Sinai temple was the next speaker. He said in part:

"Anton Cermak was in himself a symbol of democracy. . . . He wielded mighty power with practical wisdom. When he was called by his party to become the standard bearer two years ago he knew that the city of Chicago was at its lowest ebb and that the difficulties and obstacles that lay ahead of him seemed well night insuperable.

"With his characteristic simplicity, with his indomitable energy, his buoyancy of spirit and grim determination, he set about to bring forth the greatness of Chicago to his fellow citizens and to the world at large. . . . He seized the torch in the darkest hour that brooded over the chaos of our city. The light that he shed dare not be dimmed. That torch now passes on to us. Our consolation can come best through our dedication to the cause of civic righteousness, so dear to him.

"The highest tribute that we can possibly pay to Anton Cermak is to rise above political factions, and in these days of crisis—for Chicago doubly so—to choose as his successor one who is worthy of his ideals and his faith, and who will give himself with selfless devotion to a great challenge and a sublime cause and a great city."

PRIZED FRIENDSHIPS

The Rev. Daniel J. Prawley, pastor of St. Jerome's church, a close personal friend of the Cermak family, gave the final tribute at the Stadium. He spoke on his loyalty to friendship, saying in part:

"While there were many traits of character displayed in the life of our beloved mayor, foremost among them all, so it seems to me, was his wholesome, loyal and constant friendship. There are some who prize most highly the possession of wealth, others the prerogatives of power, and still others seek their satisfaction elsewhere, but the intimate experience of mankind establishes the fact that friendship alone fully answers to the cravings of the human heart.

"At the very outset of his career we see him winning friends and as he advances in public recognition, ever increasing their number by his loyalty. His proud boast was that he never broke faith with them. This loyalty extended not only to his friends but to the city that intrusted him with its administration.

"His sincere, untiring efforts to solve the many problems that confronted him upon entering office, to remedy the financial difficulties wherein the city found itself; in a word, to rescue and reestablish it, are further evidence of that same loyalty. Friendship entails obligations. It demands returns. In this hour it behooves those of us who enjoyed and boasted of this friendship to realize his dreams, to execute his projects for the welfare of the city he loved; in a word to carry on where he left off."

Shortly after this taps were sounded and the procession started for the long march to the cemetery.

Thousands Jam Chicago Stadium at Civic Service Honoring Chicago's Slain Mayor

The body of Mayor Cermak going to its last resting place yesterday afternoon in the Cermak mausoleum at the Bohemian National cemetery following Masonic rites. A vast crowd was at the cemetery, as well as at the Stadium earlier.

CERMAK FUNERAL NOTES

Simplest of all the many floral tributes to the slain mayor, the small sheath of Easter lilies tied in bronze ribbon, sent by President Roosevelt, which for three days have been the only flowers on the casket, were augmented before the casket left the city hall by fresh lilies placed over the withered ones.

The calla lilies and feathery yellow acacia, which formed the principal setting for the bier in the Stadium, later were taken by policemen to various hospitals.

The white cross outlined in flowers on which the casket rested in the Stadium was formed of white felt stretched four yards wide from north to south and east to west. An effort was made to get white velour, but a sufficient amount could not be found.

"Watch the step!" warned policemen in muffled voices as the pallbearers bore their heavy burden from the Stadium. They stepped up a sudden incline at the exit.

There have been no days off for the police department the last three days. Inside the Stadium 160 policemen were on duty and 480 more were stationed outside, all under the command of Supervising Captain John Stege.

Chopin's "Funeral March" was the only piece played by the Federation of Musicians' band of 350 on the way from the city hall to the Stadium. As the caisson was halted before the Warren avenue entrance before entering a second federation band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

During Gov. Horner's eulogy many men in the audience as well as women were seen wiping their eyes with handkerchiefs, and one policeman was seen to brush away tears with a white gloved fist.

By Mayor Cermak's daughters' wishes, a guard of honor preceding them in the parade was composed of members of the Sokol union, a Bohemian athletic society to which their father belonged for many years.

Ex-Mayor Carter Harrison and Edward F. Dunne were seated near each other at the services.

Although the flood lights hanging free from the ceiling of the Stadium were turned on brightly over the casket, which appeared so small in the vast arena, brilliant sunlight falling through the long windows of the building outshone the artificial light.

Before the last of the procession moved from the city hall in the morning, and as the representatives of 52 nations with their high silk hats held over their hearts followed the casket from the La Salle street entrance, venders of "memorial buttons" who had charged 10 cents a button began hawking their wares for a nickel.

Not a single cigaret or cigar was lighted among the 23,000 person in the Stadium, firemen said. It was not an order, but a voluntary mark of courtesy.

Among the many thousands who watched the funeral procession yesterday was Mrs. Mary Donahoe, 77 years old, of 8824 South Racine avenue, who recalled seeing the funeral procession for Abraham Lincoln when his body passed through Chicago en route to Springfield, 68 years ago.

ASKS U. S. STAMP AS MEMORIAL TO SLAIN MAYOR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—A new memorial postage stamp commemorating the tragic death of Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago was proposed today in a bill introduced in the house by Representative Jennings Randolph [Dem., W. Va.], a new member.

Under Mr. Randolph's bill the stamp would be issued on the first of June simultaneously with the opening of the Chicago Century of Progress exposition. It would, said Mr. Randolph, bear a likeness of the former mayor.

The West Virginian said he sponsored the measure solely out of admiration for the martyred mayor, and that no Illinois congressman had suggested it to him, although all approved the proposal after he mentioned it to them. He pointed out that had not Mayor Cermak died he would have been mayor of the World's Fair city, and that a stamp commemorating him and the exposition at the same time seemed appropriate.

Efforts by Chicago to obtain a special issue of memorial World's Fair stamps have proved unavailing thus far. Should the Randolph bill go through, however, postal officials will be compelled to make the issue of Cermak memorial stamps.

Five Cents, American, Buys a Glass of Beer in Mexico

Brownsville, Tex., March 10.—(AP)—American money still buys just as much as formerly in Mexican merchandising of Matamoros, across the Rio Grande from Brownsville, although the peso has taken a jump since the bank holiday was declared in the United States. For the first time in more than twenty years the 5 cent glass of beer has appeared in Matamoros bars, and the price of other drinks, in American money, is as low or lower than ever before.

SIGN CONTRACTS TODAY FOR POLISH BUILDING AT FAIR

Poland will have one of the largest foreign buildings on the World's Fair grounds this summer, according to an announcement by the Polish consulate last night. Final contracts for the structure, which will rise between the Adler planetarium and the Dairy building at the northern end of Northerly island, will be signed at the exposition offices today.

The plans have been drawn by the firm of George Loane Tucker, architect, and T. R. Lazarr-Lazarewicz, who will open a field office on the exposition grounds. The building will cost $100,000. It is hoped that the building, which will be two stories high, with ground dimensions of 230 by 160 feet, will be ready for occupancy within 60 days.

The structure will have a large central hall of honor, in which examples of Polish art, culture, and educational progress will be exhibited. This hall will be flanked by wings on the first floor where exhibits will show the achievements of Polish-Americans. On the second floor will be a large dining room and general auditorium.

MILLIONS IN GOLD BACK IN VAULTS OF CITY'S BANKS

Six Men Needed to Carry One Hoarding.

Millions of dollars in gold flowed into the vaults of several loop banks and of the Chicago reserve bank yesterday as gold hoarders hastened to exchange the metal for currency.

The new "gold rush" is the result of the presidential proclamation forbidding the hoarding of gold which was followed by a threat of the federal reserve system to publish the names of gold hoarders. The Chicago reserve bank and those of other districts have been ordered to send the names and addresses of gold hoarders to Washington by March 13.

Banking officials said gold was being returned into legal channels in two ways. Many hoarders are taking their gold to the cash exchange opened by the federal reserve bank in the old quarters of the National Bank of the Republic at the northwest corner of La Salle and Adams streets. There the gold is exchanged for currency without delay. Some of those who exchanged gold yesterday requested that their names be removed from the bank's list of hoarders, the officials said. The reserve bank also received gold yesterday from other cities in this district.

Banks Accept Loan.

The other channel for exchange is through several of the loop banks. At the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company, officials said yesterday that they had accepted gold from owners of safety deposit vaults there. Where the amounts were under $1,000 the depositors were being given paper currency in exchange. In amounts over $1,000 they were given receipts for the gold which may be exchanged for currency after the banking holiday.

Officials of the Harris Bank and Trust company said that receipts, but not cash were being given for gold brought out of safety deposit vaults of their institution. These receipts will be exchanged for currency when the moratorium ends.

Six Men Carry Gold.

One bank in the loop reported that six men were needed to carry the gold from the safety deposit box of one of their customers. An official of the bank estimated that this depositor had between $100,000 and $125,000 in gold which he brought out for exchange.

According to observers at the currency exchange at Adams and La Salle streets some of the persons depositing gold are doing it in a spirit of patriotism. One woman was heard to remark:

"I have been saving gold pieces for seven years, but so long as the government wants gold I'll do my part."

One man had $10,000 in gold changed into currency. Many gold notes of the old fashioned size are coming to light, as well as gold coins, it was said. The Chicago branch of the postoffice reported to Washington that $17,500 in gold had been exchanged for money orders.

Postal Withdrawals Drop.

For the first time since the beginning of the bank holiday deposits exceeded withdrawals in the postal savings bank here, according to Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder. Deposits yesterday totaled $135,921 against withdrawals of $118,855. At the same time the Chicago postoffice issued $55,554 in money orders to be paid in other cities and paid $441,771 in money orders issued elsewhere.

The Chicago Stock exchange took steps yesterday to coöperate with the federal government in bringing out gold by issuing the following order:

"Members shall prepare a record of all payments, withdrawals, and redeposits of gold or gold certificates made by them or through their firms between Feb. 1, 1933, and March 13, 1933, inclusive. Such records shall show, separately, all such payments, withdrawals, and redeposits of which members have knowledge made by them or through their firms, giving in each instance the date, the amount involved, the names and addresses of the persons for whose accounts such transactions were made, and how delivery was effected."

GOLD RUSH IN N. Y.

New York, March 10.—[Special.]—Hoarded gold continued to pour into the federal reserve bank here in such proportions this afternoon that twenty-two windows were opened to accommodate the thousands who flocked to the bank to make deposits.

Indications were that the day's receipts would exceed by far the total of $30,000,000 taken in yesterday. The gold was being received at such a rapid rate that the bank decided to remain open long after the regular closing hour at 3 p. m. Upward of 10,000 persons, it was estimated, had returned gold to the bank from 9:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and still the flow continued.

Similar activity was noted at the larger banks, but on a modified scale. One man announced his willingness to return $2,000,000 in gold—the record from an individual to date. The bank to which this offer was made announced that this depositor was not a hoarder, but that he had withdrawn the gold in anticipation of meeting a gold payment obligation. His counsel has since advised him that the meeting of the obligation in that manner is now unnecessary.

Business Houses Use Scrip and Cash to Meet Pay Rolls

Scrip in the form of "company checks" and "pay roll drafts" was the most prevalent medium of exchange as Chicago business firms prepared yesterday to meet their second weekly pay roll under the continued bank moratorium. Confidence in the security of the individual firm is the basis on which merchants are honoring the scrip, which has no legal foundation.

Other companies have built up cash reserves from receipts to accommodate employes with payment or part payment in cash.

Use Drafts for Money.

The Western Electric company established a scrip system by allowing employes to deposit their pay checks in a department created for the bank holiday emergency. Here the checks are broken up into $5 and $10 pay roll drafts on the company. Neighborhood merchants are honoring the drafts for the 9,500 employes, and are giving merchandise certificates as change. Street car checks have been issued to employes, who also may payment in cash. In a few cases, where cash is not available, employes have consented to have companies hold pay roll checks until the banks are open.

A packing firm in the stockyards has issued company checks to its employes in small denominations. These, based on the merchants' confidence in the company's financial stability, are being honored by storekeepers of the neighborhood. The Hart, Schaffner and Marx clothing firm is paying its 8,000 employes in $5 and $10 company checks and report that these are being accepted without question by merchants.

The International Harvester company has split payroll checks into $5 checks and reports that employes have had no trouble in making purchases with them. Three thousands employes of the Fair store, 4,500 workers employed by Marshall Field & Co., and the force of the Davis store have been paid in cash.

Sears Roebuck & Co., Montgomery Ward & Co., the Yellow Cab company, the Bowman Dairy company, and the Illinois Automobile club paid in cash last week and plan to do the same this week. Laundries, cleaners and dyers and the larger restaurants announced that they are able to meet pay rolls with cash receipts.

Pay Car Employes with Fares.

The Chicago Surface lines, paying by check, has set up offices in various car stations to cash the checks for employes from company receipts. The Chicago Motor Coach company announced ability to pay in cash, and the Rapid Transit lines paid employes in cash and checks.

Most persons paid bi-monthly, on the first and fifteenth of the month, had cashed their first March payroll check before the banks were closed and anticipate the opening of the banks before the second payday next Wednesday.

THE TRIBUNE yesterday paid its employes cash to the amount of 50 per cent of the pay rolls that have come due since the bank holiday began. The employes returned checks issued to them earlier and received new checks for the balance which was not paid in cash. The same system, it was announced, will be followed with pay rolls coming due today.

NICK LOSES $3, BUT WINS $10 IN HOLD UP OF STORE

To be held up at a profit—not a loss—was the pleasant experience last night of Nick Ramos, owner of a fruit store at 1547 East 53d street. Two bandits shoved him into a rear room, one drawing his revolver at the same time. Something fell from the robber's pocket as he whipped out the gun, and Ramos, with an eye for business even in this moment of stress, casually covered the fallen object with his foot.

The bandits departed a moment later with $3 taken from the cash register. However, Ramos didn't mind. He had a $10 bill which the careless bandit had dropped.

Dynamite Bomb Blast Wrecks Flat Vestibule

A dynamite bomb was exploded early today in the vestibule of the four flat two story building at 2014 North La Crosse avenue. The vestibule was wrecked and a number of windows in the building were broken with a total damage of $300. Paul Calistro, owner of the building and proprietor of three barber shops, said he knew of no reason for the bombing.

Newton, Ia., March 10.—(AP)—Four persons were found shot to death on the Floyd Sanford farm near Reasnor late today. Sheriff Earl Shields believes Mahland Shipley, 60, hired man, killed Mr. and Mrs. Sanford and their daughter, Rosalie, then ended his own life.

POLICEMAN AND 2 OTHERS SHOT IN HOTEL BATTLE

Policeman John Payton, Peter Gallagher, and Frank Verego were wounded early today in an exchange of shots between the policeman and Verego in the Crown hotel, 1659 Division street, owned by the latter. Payton lives at the hotel and Gallagher is an employe there. Payton had just returned to his room when Mrs. Angeline Verego, wife of the owner, complained to him that her husband was armed and had threatened to beat her. Payton went to the lobby to pacify Verego.

Suddenly Verego fired, wounding Payton in the right arm and left leg. Payton returned the fire, inflicting a minor wound in Verego's back. A bullet from one of the guns hit Gallagher in the abdomen. His wound is serious.

FORMER LEGION HEAD FOR SLASH IN VETERAN AID

New York, March 10.—(AP)—Col. Frank D'Olier, first national commander of the American Legion, made public tonight the following telegram he sent to President Roosevelt:

ROOSEVELT PLAN TO PUT IDLE TO WORK IS DRAFTED

$500 Million Bond Issue to Establish Camps.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—Plans for organizing the American army of idle on military lines, so that an orderly system of giving them work on his $500 million dollar public construction program can be followed out, will be included by President Roosevelt in his next message to congress, it was revealed today.

The message was to have been given to congress tomorrow, but the President now believes that he should hold it up until his message asking drastic powers to economize is acted upon or at least well on the way.

Use Federal Bond Money.

Mr. Roosevelt plans to swing the efforts of three departments—war, agriculture and interior—behind his idle relief project, which contemplates the use of federal bond moneys in forestry and road work, new buildings, power development and flood control.

The President's advisers stressed as important today that the program is intended in all of its phases to incur no eventual loss of revenue to the government, and in many cases he expects the various projects to bring in revenue sufficient to pay off the principal and interest of the bond issues as they become due. The bonds would have long term maturities, it was declared.

Government Won't Lose.

In the case of the reforestation program, the President concedes, it is said, that a generation or more must pass before the government can recover the full amount of its expenditure, but he has several times expressed a conviction that the government never will be the loser for replenishing its vanishing forests.

The work of recruiting the hordes of idle over the nation will be in charge of the war department, it was learned, and jobless men will be quartered in large camps from which they will be sent to various construction projects as the need arises, and in a fashion equitable to all groups. There is some discussion of providing for the subsistence of the jobless in these camps at $1 each per day.

Confers With His Aids.

The President discussed the plan at length today when Secretaries Harold Ickes, interior; Daniel C. Roper, commerce, and Cordell Hull, state; Homer Cummings, attorney general; James A. Farley, postmaster general, and Vice President Garner. Henry Morgenthau, new chairman of the federal farm board, also was called into the conference. Later the President invited William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to the White House for a discussion of the plan.

Mr. Green would not discuss his views on the proposal.

Little Change in Condition of Senator Robt. B. Howell

Washington, D. C., March 10.—(AP)—The general condition of Senator Robert B. Howell of Nebraska was reported tonight at Walter Reed hospital where he is confined with pneumonia as not as good as for the last two days.

WIDOW, 80, OFFERS HER GOLD BRACELETS TO AID GOVERNMENT

Two matched gold bracelets designed by a craftsman many years ago were received by THE TRIBUNE yesterday from an 80 year old widow, who wants them given to the federal government. The donor was Mary Adeline Mullen of Columbus Grove, O. She believes in her country and hopes to see the end of hoarding.

MRS. MARY MULLEN

In her letter, which accompanied the package, Mrs. Mullen explained that she had no money, so she was donating the bracelets, which were given to her sixty years ago by her husband.

"In the course of my life," Mrs. Mullen wrote, "I have seen my country pass through several periods which were severe on our people. But they were cleared up by our own strength and I am sure that this depression will end soon if we only work together."

Following out Mrs. Mullen's request, the bracelets were offered to the federal reserve branch at 126 South La Salle street, where the government is exchanging gold pieces for federal reserve notes.

Frederick Bateman, one of the officials of the branch, looked at the bracelets and shook his head.

"It was a fine thing to do," he said, "but we can't accept them. We are receiving only gold and gold certificates and distributing federal reserve notes, silver and minor coins in exchange."

The bracelets will be mailed back to Mrs. Mullen.

$50,000,000 CASH A DAY HANDLED BY EXPRESS CO.

With a huge volume of the city's business being handled on a cash basis, one of the centers for the movement of currency is the offices of Brinks Express company, which is handling about $50,000,000 a day in a fleet of armored cars.

The Brinks offices, in a building at 571 West Jackson boulevard, resembles an armored fortress. In addition to the Chicago movements, the concern is headquarters for a general movement of cash throughout the country which amounts to about $500,000,000 daily. The company has branch offices in some sixty cities, including New York City, and is serving more than 800 communities. All its trucks have been operating night and day in keeping the wheels of commerce moving.

Most of the cash being shipped between cities is being sent by registered mail, according to Frank Allen, president of the company. All currency moving within cities travels in armored cars protected by from two to four heavily armed guards. Insurance policies totaling approximately 2 billion dollars insure the currency.

DENVER KIDNAP SUSPECT KILLS 2 IN CALIFORNIA

Yreka, Cal., March 11.—[Special.]—State Traffic Officer Steve Kent and Lester Quigley, garage mechanic, were shot and killed here tonight by George Manning, suspected kidnaper of E. G. Ballinger, border customs guard. Manning also is believed to have been involved in the recent kidnaping of Charles Boettcher, wealthy Denver broker.

Manning and his companion, Paul Newcomb, were captured by Sheriff Andy Calkins and his son, Deputy Sheriff Charles Calkins, after a running battle with Manning. The younger Calkins was knocked out with Manning's clubbed gun and Manning finally tried to shoot himself, but his gun was empty.

Newcomb was captured in a drug store where he had tried to hide a revolver. He told officers he was a hitch hiker whom Manning had picked up earlier in the day and knew nothing about the kidnaping of Ballinger, who had been left beaten and tied to a tree by two man whose car he had stopped near Bellingham, Wash., early Thursday. Police believe his story.

The men will be questioned regarding the kidnaping of Boettcher, who was returned to his Colorado home after the payment of $60,000 ransom after he had been held prisoner in a South Dakota ranch house for seventeen days. The descriptions of Ballinger's kidnapers were declared by Denver police to answer those of escaped members of the kidnap gang, Verne Sankey and Gordon Mikhorn.

Tonight's fatal shooting occurred when Kent and Quigley, whom he had impressed into service, sought to stop Manning's car on telephonic advices from the checking station on the California-Oregon boundary 25 miles north of here.

LAUNDRY BOILER BLOWS UP; FEAR WATCHMAN DEAD

A boiler explosion wrecked the two story plant of the Ideal Laundry and Dry Cleaning company at 7341-43 South State street early this morning. Police began a search in the debris in the belief a watchman had been trapped. Neighbors said that after the blast they heard a man groaning in the wreckage.

The blast crashed through the rear of the place, smashing two private garages facing the rear and damaging four automobiles.

3,361 REALTY TAX BILLS PAID IN DAY; $10,000 IN GOLD

More than $10,000 in gold coin was received in payment of tax bills yesterday at the office of County Treasurer MacDonough, which remained open throughout the day. Total payments during the day were $338,675, and were almost entirely the tax bills of small home owners. The number of bills paid totaled 3,361.

Treasurer MacDonough announced during the day that his drive to collect real estate taxes by levying upon the personal property of the delinquent taxpayers, first scheduled to start today, would be postponed until March 20.

The banking moratorium, making it difficult for taxpayers to meet their bills, even if they wish to do so, was one reason for the postponement. Another was that County Judge Jarecki would not relinquish jurisdiction over the enormous number of tax objection cases in his court, which he dismissed in a blanket order several weeks ago, until March 20.

Still a third reason is the desire to give property owners time to enroll for payment of 1928, 1929, and 1930 taxes in four annual installments.

EXPECT HIGHER FOOD COST AFTER THIS WEEK-END

But Bargain Retail Prices Prevail Now.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Chicago housewives today will enjoy their last week of food purchases on a falling retail market, if trends in wholesale markets are accepted as a barometer of what consumers may expect in coming weeks.

Real bargains will be found by the careful shoppers. Ten pound sacks of sugar are being offered in stores here as low as 40 cents. This price is even below the wholesale prices being quoted for refined sugar this week in New York.

Family flour also is on the bargain counter today, though a rise in prices looms ahead. One group of stores is offering standard brands of flour at 59 cents for a 24½ pound sack, other brands as low as 47 cents being available in Chicago stores today.

Wholesale Prices Rise.

Wholesale quotations on flour advanced from 15 to 22 per cent during the last week, due largely to a shortage of available wheat and the added risks in operating the milling industry on a cash basis without the protection of a hedging market in the Chicago Board of Trade. The only factors which held retail flour prices down this week were the supplies on hand, sufficient for nearly two weeks, and the presence of government flour supplied by the Red Cross for the needy throughout the nation.

Bakers yesterday expressed the view that bread prices would continue at present low levels for some time, unless drastic changes occur in the economic situation.

Among the other attractively priced foods offered in Chicago food stores this week are canned goods, beef roasts and steaks, veal, ham, frying and roasting chickens, bananas, head lettuce, new potatoes, fresh tomatoes, salmon, most kinds of fresh and smoked fish, evaporated milk and candy.

Hundreds of Cars Held.

Few shoppers, selecting their fresh fruits and vegetables for the week-end, realize the nation-wide efforts put forth this week to insure an ample supply with prevailing low prices. Several hundred carloads of potatoes, oranges, lettuce, cabbage, onions and other foods were kept in refrigerated cars on railroad tracks in Chicago.

By telephone and telegraph, the daily needs of such large marketing centers as New York, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and Detroit were ascertained. Whenever the supplies of particular perishables became low, and buyers started boosting prices, and the reserve stocks in Chicago were rushed to the point where they were needed.

The effect was not only to keep supplies up to demand, but because the prices were held down, consumers were able to buy fresh commodities during a time of money stringency.

Producers of these foodstuffs also were able to prevent the loss of customers who might have changed their buying habits with a rise in prices, such as occurred this week when farms, housewives and meat retailers turned away from fresh pork because prices were doubled in three days. Pork prices today have returned almost to their levels of a week ago. Increased supplies have been received from the farms.

STATE TO PROBE MILK SITUATION HERE NEXT WEEK

McLaughlin Confirms Plans for Survey.

Walter W. McLaughlin, director of the Illinois department of agriculture, last night in Springfield confirmed reports that he expected to make a survey of the Chicago and northern Illinois milk area early next week.

The newly created zoning system established by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the Chicago board of health, as well as plans for obtaining a market in the metropolitan area for more Illinois dairymen, were said to be developments which the state department wished to survey.

Several delegations of northern Illinois dairymen have been consulting Gov. Horner and Mr. McLaughlin in recent weeks. As a result of one of these conferences the officers of the Pure Milk association indicated they would support the administration's plan for a sales tax to procure relief funds.

State Looks Into Claims.

Other delegations of farmers have protested that they were being deprived of a market for their milk in Chicago while dairy companies in Chicago continued to buy from farmers 200 miles distant from Chicago. It was learned last night that the state administration was looking into their claims.

Recent studies of the potential milk supply which could be obtained from Illinois for the Chicago area, within a 90 mile radius of the city, show that nearly 900 dairymen possess herds which do not now furnish milk or cream for Chicago. Most of these dairymen are shipping to creameries or condensaries and are paid as little as 85c a hundred pounds for milk.

The changes being made in the metropolitan dairy market are to be discussed at the annual meeting of the Pure Milk association in Chicago next Tuesday. More than 4,000 farmers from Wisconsin, Illinois, and Indiana have made reservations for the meeting to be held in the Auditorium theater.

Dairies Seek New Outlets.

Meanwhile owners of dairy plants in northern Wisconsin, whose permits will be voided or altered by the zoning system of the city health department on March 20, are seeking new outlets for the products.

The temporary zoning system will exclude cream beyond the 250 mile radius and all milk beyond the 130 mile radius. It is reported that the zones will be further restricted in the near future.

BANDITS ROB MEAT MARKET.

Three gunmen yesterday escaped with $1,400 that had accumulated in the Rahn Meat market, 1713 West 63d street, during the banking holiday.

FORMER CONVICT WINS RIGHT TO TAKE HIS SEAT IN CONGRESS

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—Francis H. Shoemaker, Farmer-Laborite from Minnesota who served a year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary for violation of the postal laws, was formally seated in the house of representatives today. The house voted, 230 to 75, to administer the oath to the new member and then to refer the case to the elections committee for investigation.

Shoemaker was barred from taking the oath yesterday when Representative Albert Carter [Rep., Cal.] protested that his conviction on a felony charge stripped him of the right to hold elective office under the Minnesota constitution.

"The farmer-laborite was convicted in 1921 for sending "libelous and defamatory" matter through the mails. During a political feud with a Minnesota banker, it was charged, he sent a letter to his antagonist addressed "R. W. Putnam, robber of widows and orphans."

During the debate today, it was said that Shoemaker boasted in his biography furnished for the congressional directory that he "came from the penitentiary to congress whereas many other men went from congress to the penitentiary."

DRY OFFICIALS PERMIT ALCOHOL WITH GASOLINE

Peoria, Ill., March 10.—(AP)—The Peoria area today saw the beginning of an experiment—dilution of gasoline with alcohol chiefly made from grain. It is expected by the Illinois Agricultural association to help reduce surpluses of grain.

The mixture, containing 90 per cent gasoline and 10 per cent alcohol, was put on sale at 12 storage stations maintained by county farm bureau oil companies within 50 miles of Peoria. Its sale will be continued for 60 or 90 days. After that a survey will be conducted among users to determine its value.

Special permission was required for the sale from J. M. Doran, head of the federal bureau of industrial alcohol at Washington and E. C. Yellowley, supervisor of alcohol permits at Chicago. Prohibition department inspectors are supervising the dilution process. The gasolian was furnished by the Illinois Farm Supply company, cooperate affiliate of the Illinois Agricultural association. The alcohol came from the American commercial alcohol corporation at Pekin, Ill. Sixteen carloads of the new fuel composed the first distribution.

Proponents of the plan, who have persuaded Illinois congressional delegates to introduce bills requiring dilution of all gasoline used in the country, are agricultural leaders.

The farm organization leaders say the new fuel causes improved acceleration, smoother motor operation, increased mileage and that it has anti-knock qualities. Its price is about 2 cents more than ordinary gasoline.

ESIDENT ASKS OWERS TO CUT HALF A BILLION

ngress Is Expected to Legislate Today.

cent cut in the pay of all federal oloyés, including members of con- ss, but with provisions allowing the sident to lighten the cut should the of living mount.

Growing Deficit Cited.

esident Roosevelt in his special sage challenged congress with the res of the growing federal deficit. figures were, he pointed out, 462 on dollars for the fiscal year 1931. illion 472 million for 1932. They probably be 1 billion 200 million 1933 by the time the year closes June 30. And in 1934, at the ent rate, another billion dollars have been added to a public debt ady costing the taxpayer 725 mil- a year in interest charges alone. e task of feeding this swollen and growing monster, he pointed out, been a major contribution to the ent critical state of the country. he credit of the government, he rted, must be kept solid as the sure foundation stone.

was true, he granted, that some ld be harmed by the economies in pect.

But the failure to make them will ct all our citizens," he proclaimed. he very stability of our government it is concerned, and when that is cerned the benefits of some must subordinated to the needs of all." ongress has heard such words be- —and dawdled.

ut today at the message from their ty leader the Democrats in con- s sprung to action.

ouse leaders announced that the nomy measure would be passed to- row.

peaker Henry T. Rainey of Illinois moned house Democrats to caucus 0 o'clock tomorrow morning. At time, the speaker said, the ma- ty party will bind itself to vote for Roosevelt bill. The measure is to shot through the house without ndment. Plans were laid tonight rush ruthlessly any opposition.

G. O. P. Support Indicated.

epublican leaders announced they back up President Roosevelt and e than make up for any defections Democratic ranks. Representative d A. Britton [Rep., Ill.] said a vass of Republicans indicated they uld vote almost as a unit for the nomy bill.

he bill was immediately taken un- consideration by the senate finance mittee, which had sitting with it special house economy committee members of last session's senate nomy committee.

merging from the senate finance mittee room this evening, Chair- n Harrison announced that the bill uld be approved and submitted to senate tomorrow.

"This proposition is one that is not ng to be delayed," declared the ssissippi senator. "It's certain to through, and I do not believe it ll be necessary to have a Demo- tic caucus to mobilize the majority e. Its enactment into law means balanced budget. It will give con nce to business and go far toward nging the country back to nor- lcy."

Senator Harrison said the finance mittee would meet at 10 o'clock morrow morning and resume con- eration of the measure. The plan, said, is to allow the veterans' or- nizations an opportunity for a brief aring. If possible, the bill is to be orted out of the senate at 12 lock, when it convenes.

The veterans' provisions of the econ- y bill will give the President au- ority virtually to rewrite and, if he shes, to abolish sections of the vet- ans' benefit structure which con- ss has built up, with the bonus as base.

Four Groups Eligible.

Four groups are to be eligible for mpensation—those with service con- cted disabilities; veterans with per- nent disability, even though non- rvice connected, of all wars since civil war; widows and orphans of ose who died as the result of service nnected injuries; widows and or- ans of veterans of any war since e civil war and excepting the world ar.

The President is to have full au- ority to rule concerning the various grees of disability to be pension- le; to define the dates of the com- encement and end of the wars, thus aking it possible to fix the armi- ice as the close of the world war stead of the 1921 treaty of peace; to scribe the number of days of serv- e required for eligibility.

All pensions and allowances to vet- ans of wars prior to the Spanish war e to be cut 10 per cent.

Veterans administration appropria- ons for the present fiscal year total ,020,464,000. Under the 1934 ap- opriations bill which would have be- me law had not President Hoover etoed it, congress refused to comply ith Mr. Hoover's recommendations or a 127 million dollar slash and oted the veterans administration 17 illions more than in 1933, or a total f $1,037,728,000.

Under the employés' pay cut pro- isions of the bill the furloughs in orce under the present economy act vill be repealed.

The $10,000 salaries of representa- tives and senators are to be cut to $8,500.

All cuts are to be effective for one year from date of passage.

Next in order before congress, it is expected, will be President Roosevelt's scheme for a half billion dollar con- struction bond issue. And next, it was predicted, will come the beer bill.

TEXT OF MESSAGE

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's message asking power to effect economies follows:

"The nation is deeply gratified by the immediate response given yester- day by the congress to the necessity for drastic action to restore and im- prove our banking system.

"A like necessity exists with re- spect to the finances of the govern- ment itself which requires equally courageous, frank and prompt action.

"For three long years the federal government has been on the road to- ward bankruptcy.

"For the fiscal year 1931 the deficit was $462,000,000.

"For the fiscal year 1932 it was $2,- 472,000,000.

"For the fiscal year 1933 it will probably exceed $1,200,000,000.

"For the fiscal year 1934, based on the appropriation bills passed by the last congress and the estimated reve- nues the deficit will probably exceed $1,000,000,000 unless immediate action is taken.

"Thus we shall have piled up an ac- cumulated deficit of $5,000,000,000.

"With the utmost seriousness I point out to the congress the profound effect of this fact upon our national economy.

"It has contributed to the recent collapse of our banking structure. It has accentuated the stagnation of the economic life of our people. It has added to the ranks of the unemployed. Our government's house is not in order, and for many reasons no effec- tive action has been taken to restore it to order.

"Upon the unimpaired credit of the United States government rest the safety of deposits, the security of in- surance policies, the activity of indus- trial enterprises, the value of our agri- cultural products and the availability of employment.

"The credit of the United States government definitely affects these fundamental human values. It, there- fore, becomes our first concern to make secure the foundation. National recovery depends upon it.

"Too often in recent history liberal governments have been wrecked on rocks of loose fiscal policy. We must avoid this danger.

Too Late for Contemplation.

"It is too late for a leisurely ap- proach to this problem. We must not wait to act several months hence. The emergency is accentuated by the ne- cessity of meeting great refunding operations this spring.

"We must move with a direct and resolute purpose now. The members of the congress and I are pledged to immediate economy.

"I am, therefore, assuming that you and I are in complete agreement as to the urgent necessity, and my con- stitutional duty is to advise you as to the methods for obtaining drastic retrenchment at this time.

"I am not speaking to you in gen- eral terms. I am pointing out a defi- nite road.

"The last congress enacted legisla- tion relating to the reorganization and elimination of executive agencies, but the economies thus to be effected are small when viewed in the light of the great deficit for the next fiscal year. They will not meet the pressing needs of our credit situation.

Asks for Specific Powers.

"Provision for additional saving is essential, and therefore I am asking the congress today for new legisla- tion laying down broad principles for the granting of pensions and other veteran benefits, and giving to the ex- ecutive the authority to prescribe the administrative details.

"We are unanimous in upholding the duty of the government to care for those who suffer in its defense and for their widows and orphans. The application, however, of this great principle to large numbers of people involves complications—so great that it is almost impossible to draw legisla- tion with sufficient flexibility to pro- vide substantial justice in varying sit- uations.

"The proposed legislation states the principles and, limited by them, per- mits the executive to draw the lines of differentiation necessary to justice.

Salary Legislation Asked.

"In accord with the same purpose of substantial justice I request also the enactment of legislation relating to the salaries of civil and military employés of the government.

"This would repeal the existing fur- lough plan, substituting therefor a general principle and authorizing the executive to make application of this principle.

"The proper legislative function is to fix the amount of expenditure, the means by which it is to be raised and the general principles under which the expenditures are to be made.

"The details of expenditure particu- larly in view of the great present emergency can be more wisely and equitably administered through the executive. The flexibility of the meas- ures which I am proposing is not only practical but proceeds along the road of constitutional government.

"Such economies which can be made will, it is true, affect some of our citizens; but the failure to make them will affect all of our citizens. The very stability of our government itself is concerned and when that is concerned the benefits of some must be subordinated to the needs of all.

Promises Sympathetic Attitude.

"When a great danger threatens our basic security it is my duty to advise the congress of the way to pre- serve it. In so doing I must be fair not only to the few but to the many. It is in this spirit that I appeal to you.

"If the congress chooses to vest me with this responsibility it will be exer- cised in a spirit of justice to all, of sympathy to those who are in need, and of maintaining inviolate the basic welfare of the United States.

"I ask that this legislation go into effect at once without even waiting for the beginning of the next fiscal year. I give you assurance that if this is done there is reasonable pros- pect that within a year the income of the government will be sufficient to cover the expenditures of the gov- ernment."

TEXT OF BILL EMPOWERING PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT TO SLASH VETERANS' BENEFITS AND OTHER U. S. EXPENSES

Washington, D. C., March 10.—(AP)—The text of the bill introduced late today by Senator Robinson, the Democratic leader, to carry out President Roosevelt's economy plan follows in full:

A bill to maintain the credit of the United States government.

Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled:

TITLE I.

VETERANS.

Section 1. That subject to such requirements and limitations as shall be contained in regulations to be issued by the President, and within the limits of appropriations made by congress, the following classes of persons may be paid a pension:

[a] Any person who served in the active military or naval service and who is disabled as a result of disease or injury or aggravation of a pre-existing disease or injury incurred in line of duty in such service.

[b] Any person who served in the active military or naval service during any war subsequent to the civil war, including the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection and who is permanently disabled as a result of wound or disease.

[c] The widow, child, or children, dependent mother or father, of any person who dies as a result of disease or injury incurred or aggravated in line of duty in the active military or naval service.

[d] The widow and or child of any deceased person who served during any war subsequent to the civil war, including the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection and prior to the world war.

[e] For the purpose of subparagraph [b] of this section, the world war shall be deemed to have ended Nov. 11, 1918.

Section 2. The minimum and maximum monthly rate of pension which may be paid for disability or death shall be as follows: For disability, from $6 to $275; for death, from $12 to $75.

Section 3. For each class of persons specified in subparagraphs [a] and [b] of section 1 of this title the President is hereby authorized to prescribe by regulation the minimum degrees of disability and such higher degrees of disability, if any, as in his judgment should be recognized and prescribe the rate of pension payable for each such degree of disability. In fixing rates of pensions for disability or death the President shall prescribe by regulation such differentiation as he may deem just and equitable, in the rates to be paid to veterans of different wars and or their dependents and to be paid for:

[a] Disabilities and deaths resulting from disease or injury incurred or aggravated in line of duty in wartime service;

[b] Disabilities and deaths resulting from disease or injury incurred or aggravated in line of duty in peace time service;

[c] Disabilities and deaths not incurred in service.

Section 4. The President shall prescribe by regulation [subject to the provisions of section 1 (e) of this title] the date of the beginning and of the termination of the period in each war subsequent to the civil war, including the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection, service within which shall for the purpose of this act be deemed war time service. The President shall further prescribe by regulation the required number of days of war or peacetime service for each class of veterans, the time limit on filing of claims for each class of veterans and their dependents, the nature and extent of proofs and presumptions for such different classes and any other requirements as to entitlement as he shall deem equitable and just. The President in establishing conditions precedent may prescribe different requirements or conditions for the veterans of different wars and their dependents and may further subdivide the classes of persons as outlined in section 1 of this title and apply different requirements or conditions to such subdivisions.

Section 5. All decisions rendered by the administrator of veterans' affairs under the provisions of this title, or the regulations issue pursuant thereto, shall be final and conclusive on all questions of law and fact, and no other official or court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to review by mandamus or otherwise any such decision.

Section 6. In addition to the pensions provided in this title, the administrator of veterans' affairs is hereby authorized under such limitations as may be prescribed by the President, and within the limits of existing veterans' administration facilities, to furnish to veterans of any war, including the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection, domiciliary care where they are suffering with permanent disabilities and medical and hospital treatment for diseases or injuries incurred or aggravated in line of duty in the active military or naval service.

Section 7. The administrator of veterans' affairs subject to the general direction of the President and in accordance with regulations to be issued by the President shall administer, execute, and enforce the provisions of this title and for such purpose shall have the same authority and powers as are provided in sections 425, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 440, 442, 443, 444, 447, 450, 451, 453, 455, 457, 458, 459, 459A, 459C, 459D, 459E, 459F, title 38, U. S. C., and such other sections of title 38, U. S. C., as relate to the administration of the laws granting pensions.

Section 8. The administrator of veterans' affairs is hereby authorized in carrying out the provisions of title 1 of this act or any other pension act to delegate authority to render decisions to such person or persons as he may find necessary. Within the limitations of such delegations, any decisions rendered by such person or persons shall have the same force and effect as though rendered by the administrator of veterans' affairs. The President shall personally approve all regulations issued under the provisions of this title.

Section 9. Claims for benefits under this title shall be filed with the veterans' administration under such regulations, including provisions for hearing, determination, and administrative review, as the President may approve, and payments shall not be made for any period prior to date of application. When a claim shall be finally disallowed under this title and the regulations issued thereunder, it may not thereafter be reopened or allowed.

Section 10. Notwithstanding the provisions of section 2 of this title, any person who served as an officer of the army, navy, or marine corps of the United States during the world war, other than as an officer of the regular army, navy, or marine corps, who made valid application for retirement under the provisions of public No. 506, Seventieth congress, enacted May 24, 1928, sections 581 and 582, title 38, United States code, and who prior to the passage of this act has been granted retirement with pay, shall be entitled to continue to receive retirement pay at the monthly rate now being paid him if the disability for which he has been retired resulted from disease or injury or aggravation of a preëxisting disease or injury incurred in line of duty between April 6, 1917, and Nov. 11, 1918: provided, that the disease or injury or aggravation of the disease or injury directly resulted from the performance of military or naval duty, and that such person otherwise meets the requirements of the regulations which may be issued under the provisions of this act.

Section 11. All offenses committed and all penalties or forfeiture incurred under the acts repealed by section 17 of this title may be prosecuted and punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if said repeal had not been made and any person who forfeited rights to benefits under any such acts shall not be entitled to any benefits that may have been made, and any person who forfeited rights to benefits under any such acts shall not be entitled to any benefits under this title.

Section 12. That whoever in any claim for benefits under this title or by regulations issued pursuant to this title makes any sworn statement of a material fact, knowing it to be false, shall be guilty of perjury and shall be punished by a fine of not more than $5,000 or by imprisonment for not more than two years, or both.

Section 13. That if any person entitled to payment of pension under this title, whose right to such payment under this title or under any regulation issued under this title ceases upon the happening of any contingency, thereafter fraudulently accepts any such payment, he shall be punished by a fine of not more than $2,000, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Section 14. That whoever shall obtain or receive any money, check, or pension under this title, or regulations issued under this title, without being entitled to the same, and with intent to defraud the United States or any beneficiary of the United States, shall be punished by a fine of not more than $2,00, or by imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Section 15. Any person who shall knowingly make or cause to be made, or conspire, combine, aid, or assist in, agree to, arrange for, or in any wise procure the making or presentation of a false or fraudulent affidavit, declaration, certificate, statement, voucher, or paper, or writing purporting to be such, concerning any claim for benefits under this title, shall forfeit all rights, claims, and benefits under this title, and, in addition to any and all other penalties imposed by law, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Section 16. Every guardian, curator, conservator, committee, or person legally vested with the responsibility or care of a claimant or his estate, having charge and custody in a fiduciary capacity of money paid under the provisions of this title, for the benefit of any minor or incompetent claimant, who shall embezzle the same in violation of his trust, or convert the same to his own use, shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $2,000 or imprisonment at hard labor for a term not exceeding five years, or both.

Section 17. All public laws granting medical or hospital treatment, domiciliary care, compensation, pension disability allowance, or retirement pay to veterans of the Spanish-American war, including the Boxer rebellion and the Philippine insurrection, the world war, or to former members of the military or naval service for injury or disease incurred or aggravated in the line of duty in the military or naval service except so far as they relate to persons who served prior to the Spanish-American war, and the retirement of officers and enlisted men of the regular army, navy, or marine corps, are hereby repealed, and all laws granting or pertaining to yearly renewable term insurance are hereby repealed, but payments in accordance with such laws shall continue to the first day of the third calendar month following the month during which this act is enacted. The administrator of veterans' affairs under the general direction of the President shall immediately cause to be reviewed all allowed claims under the above referred to laws, and, where a person is found entitled under this act, authorize payment or allowance of benefits in accordance with the provisions of this act commencing with the first day of the fourth calendar month following the month during which this act is enacted, and notwithstanding the provisions of section 9 of this act, no further claim in such cases shall be required: provided, that nothing contained in this section shall interfere with payments heretofore made or hereafter to be made under contracts of yearly renewable term insurance which have matured prior to the date of enactment of this act and under which payments have been commenced.

Section 18. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, pension, and or any other monetary gratuity payable to former members of the military or naval service in wars prior to the Spanish-American war for service, age, disease, or injury, except retired pay of officers and enlisted men of the regular army, navy, or marine corps shall be reduced by 10 per centum of the amount payable.

TITLE II.

OFFICERS AND EMPLOYES.

Section 1. When used in this title: [a] The terms "officer" and "employé" mean any person rendering services in or under any branch or service of the United States government or the government of the District of Columbia, but do not include [1] officers whose compensation may not, under the constitution, be diminished during their continuance in office; [2] the Vice President, senators, representatives in congress, delegates, and resident commissioners; [3] officers and employés on the rolls of the senate and house of representatives. [4] any person in respect of any office position, or employment the amount of compensation of which is expressly fixed by international agreement; and [5] any person in respect of any office, position, or employment the compensation of which is paid under the terms of any contract in effect on the date of the enactment of this title, if such compensation may not lawfully be reduced.

[b] The term "compensation" means any salary, pay, wage, allowance (except allowances for travel), or other emolument paid for services rendered in any civilian or noncivilian office, position, or employment, and includes the retired pay of judges (except judges whose compensation, prior to retirement or resignation, could not, under the constitution, have been diminished) and the retired pay of all commissioned and other personnel of the coast and geodetic survey, the lighthouse service, and the public health service, and the retired pay of all commissioned and other personnel of the army, navy, marine corps, and coast guard; but does not include payments out of any retirement, disability, or relief fund made up wholly or in part of contributions of employés.

Section 2. For that portion of the fiscal year 1933 beginning with the first day of the calendar month following the month during which this act is enacted, and for fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, the compensation of every officer or employé shall be determined as follows:

[a] The compensation which such officer or employé would receive under the provisions of any existing law, schedule, regulation, executive order, or departmental order shall first be determined as though this title [except section 4] had not been enacted.

[b] The compensation as determined under subparagraph [a] of this section shall be reduced by the percentage, if any, determined in accordance with section 3 of this title.

Section 3. [a] The President is authorized to investigate the facts relating to the cost of living in the United States during the six months period ending June 30, 1928, to be known as the base period, and upon the basis of such facts and the application thereto of such principles as he may find proper, determine an index figure of the cost of living during such period. The President is further authorized to make a similar investigation and determination of an index figure of the cost of living during the six months period ending Dec. 31, 1932, and each six months period thereafter.

[a] The President shall announce by executive order the index figure for the base period and for each subsequent period determined by him under paragraph [a] of this section. The percentage, if any, by which the cost of living index for any six months' period, as provided in paragraph [a] of this section, if lower than such index for the base period, shall be the percentage of reduction applicable under section 3 [b] of this title in determining compensation to be paid during the following six months' period, or such portion thereof during which this title is in effect; provided, that such percentage of reduction shall not exceed 15 per centum.

Section 4. [a] Section 4 of an act making appropriations for the treasury and postoffice departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes, approved March 3, 1933, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 4. [a] The provisions of the following sections of part II. of the legislative appropriations act, fiscal year 1933, are hereby continued in full force and effect during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, namely, sections 105 (except subsections [d] and [e] thereof), 107 (except paragraph [t] of subsection [a] thereof and subsection [b] thereof), 201, 203, 206 (except subsection [a] thereof), 211, 214, 216, 304, 315, 317, 318, and 328, and for the purpose of continuing such sections, in the application of such sections with respect to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, the figures '1933' shall be read as '1934'; the figures '1934' as '1935,' and the figures '1935' as '1936;' and, in the case of section 203, the figures '1932' shall be read as '1933'; except that in the application of such sections with respect to the fiscal year ending June 0, 1934 (but not with respect to the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933), the ollowing amendments shall apply:

"[1] Section 216 is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: 'Provided further, that no employé under the classified civil service shall be furloughed under the provisions of this section for a total of more than 90 days during the fiscal year 1934, except after full and complete compliance with all the provisions of the civil service laws and regulations relating to reductions in personnel.'

"[2] Section 317 is amended by striking out the period at the end thereof and inserting in lieu thereof a colon and the following: 'Provided further, that no part of any appropriation for "public works," nor any part of any allotment or portion available for "public works" under any appropriation, shall be transferred pursuant to the authority of this section to any appropriation for expenditure for personnel unless such personnel is required upon or in connection with "public works." "Public works" as used in this section shall comprise all projects falling in the general classes enumerated in budget statement No. 2, pages A177 to A182, inclusive, of the budget for the fiscal year 1934, and shall also include the procurement of new airplanes and the construction of vessels under appropriations for "increase of the navy." The interpretation by the director of the bureau of the budget, or by the President in the cases of the war department and the navy department, of "public works" as defined and designated herein shall be conclusive.'

"[b] All acts or parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of such sections as amended, are hereby suspended during the period in which such sections as amended, are in effect.

"[c] No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of any suit against the United States or [unless brought by the United States] against any officer, agency, or instrumentality of the United States arising out of the application as provided in this section, of such sections 105, 107, 109, or 112, as amended, unless such suit involves the constitution of the United States.

"[d] The appropriations or portions of appropriations unexpended by reason of the operation of the amendments made in subsection [a] of this section shall not be used for any purpose, but shall be impounded and returned to the treasury.

"[e] Each permanent specific annual appropriation available during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, is hereby reduced for that fiscal year by such estimated amount as the director of the bureau of the budget may determine will be equivalent to the savings that will be effected in such appropriation by reason of the application of this section and section 7."

[b] Section 5 of the treasury and postoffice appropriation act, fiscal year 1934, is hereby repealed.

[c] Section 6 of the said treasury and postoffice appropriation act, fiscal year 1934, is amended to read as follows:

"Section 6. Sections 215 of the legislative appropriation act, fiscal year 1933, shall be held applicable to the officers and employés of the Panama canal and Panama Railroad company on the isthmus of Panama, and to officers and employés of the United States [including enlisted personnel] holding official station outside the continental United States, only to the extent of depriving each of them of one month's leave of absence with pay during each of the fiscal years ending June 30, 1933, and June 30, 1934."

[d] The following sections of part II. of the legislative appropriation act, fiscal year 1933, are hereby repealed effective on the first day of the calendar month following the month in which this act is enacted; namely, sections 101, 102, 103, 104, 105 [except subsections [a], [b], and [e] thereof], 106, 107 [except paragraphs [1], [2], [3], and [4] of subsection [a] thereof], and 108.

[e] Subsection [a] of section 105 of the legislative appropriation act, fiscal year 1933, is amended to read as follows, beginning with the first day of the calendar month following the month during which this act is enacted:

"[a] The salaries of the vice president and the speaker of the house of representatives are reduced by 15 per centum; and the salaries of senators, representatives in congress, delegates, and resident commissioners are reduced by 15 per centum."

Section 5. Retirement deductions authorized by law to be made from the salary, pay, or compensation of officers or employés and transferred or deposited to the credit of a retirement fund, shall be based on the regular rate of salary, pay, or, compensation instead of on the rate as temporarily reduced under the provisions of this title.

Section 6. In the case of a corporation the majority of the stock of which is owned by the United States, to holders of the stock on behalf of the United States, or such persons as represent the interest of the United States in such corporation, shall take such action as may be necessary to apply the provisions of this title to offices, positions, and employments under such corporation and to officers and employés, thereof, with proper allowance for any reduction in compensation since Dec. 31, 1931.

Section 7. In any case in which the application of the provisions of this title to any person would result in a diminution of compensation prohibited by the constitution the secretary of the treasury is authorized to accept from such person, and cover into the treasury as miscellaneous receipts, remittance of such part of the compensation of such person as would not be paid to him if such diminution of compensation were not prohibited.

Section 8. The appropriations or portions of appropriations unexpended by reason of the operation of this title shall not be used for any purpose, but shall be impounded and returned to the terasury.

Section 9. No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction of any suit against the United States or [unless brought by the United States] against any officer, agency, or instrumentality of the United States arising out of the application of any provision of this title, unless such suit involves the constitution of the United States.

TITLE III.

AMENDMENTS TO LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATIONS ACT, FISCAL YEAR 1933.

"Section 407. Whenever the President makes an executive order under the provisions of this title, such executive order shall be submitted to the congress while in session and shall not become effective until after the expiration of sixty calendar days after such transmission, unless congress shall by law provide for an earlier effective date of such executive order or orders.

"Section 409. No executive order issued by the President in pursuance of the provisions of section 403 of this title shall become effective unless transmitted to the congress within two years from the date of the enactment of this act."

"THIS great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper . . . the only thing we have to fear is fear itself . . . This nation asks for action, and action now. This I propose to offer, pledging that the larger purposes will bind upon us all as a sacred obligation with a unity of duty."

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

The President and congress are exhibiting a spirit and a capacity for united and vigorous action which cannot but raise the morale of the whole country. Courageous leadership and the prompt demonstration by congress of its willingness to support it wake a new hope throughout the nation. They inspire a new confidence not only in our government but in ourselves to deal decisively and successfully with our difficulties. This constitutes the first step in the restoration of prosperity.

The next step is to vest in the President full power to accomplish without check or delay the drastic retrenchments in federal expenditure essential to a balance of the budget, to the revival of the public credit, to the relief of the people and of private enterprise from the drain of federal taxation, and therefore to the release and mobilization of the vast resources of the nation for the work of restoration.

The abstract morality of living within one's income has been conceded by all spendthrift governments, including our own of recent years. The abstractions need not detain us. The reasons for granting the President the power he demanded to slash government expenditures are so concrete and so pressing that he had to act as he did in demanding immediate authority to carry out a program of economy. A wasteful government has brought us low. We cannot recover until the waste is ended.

Moreover, there had to be a prompt demonstration to the world of the determination of our government not to finance itself through this crisis by turning the printing presses loose. There is only one way to put that message over convincingly and that is by actual economy. A thousand pledges by congressmen to balance the budget, we have seen, have meant nothing. The federal budget has gone unbalanced for three years, as Mr. Roosevelt said in his powerful message and as THE TRIBUNE has repeatedly pointed out. The accumulated deficits of the three years ending next June amount to 4 billion dollars. As matters now stand, the government faces another billion dollar deficit in the year ending June 30, 1934.

More congressional promises and pledges of economy would be merely more promises and pledges. The way to economize is to economize.

Half a billion can be saved by squeezing the veterans' appropriation. Perhaps as much more can come from reorganization of the executive departments, for which the President has already received authority, and from salary reductions. Altogether, these measures seem to assure a balanced budget in 1934; and if they are not sufficiently drastic the President has authority and the will to squeeze the appropriations still further.

That is the first and to readers of THE TRIBUNE a familiar reason for demanding retrenchment at once. The other reason, no less pressing in the midst of this banking crisis, is to assure the government sufficient funds with which to reconstitute the banking system on a sound and workable basis. Much attention has been paid to the issuance of new money with which to render the big banks in the big cities impregnable. This measure will cost the treasury next to nothing at all. The banks which will be reopened are sound by any standard and, with the provisions made for converting every deposit into cash to the last penny, no one is justified in drawing more money than is required for normal business and personal payments. The class A banks are impregnable.

The banks for which the government will have to provide new capital are the smaller banks scattered through the country. Individually they are unimportant. In the aggregate they are immensely important. The great banks in the cities are the heart of our credit structure. Through them the cities pay for the food the city man eats, and the raw materials such as coal and lumber, cotton and wool which are consumed in the factories. The food comes in and the money goes out.

Normally the return flow is provided for through the machinery of the small banks. The funds sent out from the cities for raw materials flow back in payment for manufactures and services performed in the cities. The analogy of the blood stream in the human body is as nearly perfect as an analogy can be. The reopening of the class A banks provides a means of sending blood out to the toes from the heart, but it is almost as important to provide a means of bringing blood back from the toes to the heart. Without that return flow the economic life of the nation cannot long continue.

This relationship has been clearly understood in Washington. The emergency banking act passed on Thursday night contains many provisions regarding the big banks, and toward the end another provision which permits the Reconstruction Finance corporation to restore a sufficient number of state as well as national banks to complete solvency. The government can invest in preferred stock in these banks and it will invest enough in each case to leave no more doubts of their soundness. With enough of those lesser banks reconstituted, the business life of the country can go on. The movement of goods in and out of the cities can be balanced by a flow of money in the reverse direction.

To do that job of reconstituting a sound country banking organization will take new money. If the treasury has to dissipate its resources in paying a half billion dollars this year for non-service connected disabilities, in addition to the half billion of deserved pensions, it may find itself without enough money to reorganize the banking structure at a vital point. Even to the recipients of the dole to veterans the sacrifice of their monthly stipend is a small matter in comparison with the stake at issue. A veteran who can think that his pension of $10 a month is worth months and perhaps years of business stagnation and its attendant misery and unemployment ought to be locked up as a lunatic.

The government has been spending billions wastefully. Now it has to retrench, not only because it can't raise the amounts it has been spending but also because it has far more important uses for such money as is available.

Let us be utterly candid. The veterans who suffered no injury in the last war but are receiving pensions were enlisted in a struggle against a foe 3,000 miles and more away. They could have quailed in the face of the enemy—such of them as saw fighting—and still their country would have been 3,000 miles away from immediate danger. Today they and their country are in peril as never before in our lifetime. The superb leadership of the new President will go for naught if his plans are wrecked by the lack of means to carry them out. That is why the pensions and the useless government jobs and bureaus must go. Our government, in this hour of crisis, cannot spend a fourth and more of its income, close to a billion dollars a year, for veterans' care. The best it can do, and this Mr. Roosevelt has pledged himself to adopt as his guiding principle, is to care for those who were incapacitated in service and for the widows and orphans of the men who gave their lives for their country.

The issue is clear cut. Patriotism and self-interest both dictate unhesitating support of the position which the President has taken.

FOR MODIFICATION AND REPEAL.

Immediate modification of the Volstead act pledged by the Democratic party in convention is one of the prime responsibilities of the present congress. In recognition of this pledge bills have already been introduced in the house. There should be early agreement upon one of these and its enactment.

The passage of a law permitting the sale of beer of an alcoholic content within the limits of the 18th amendment, reasonably interpreted, will be a substantial contribution to the defeat of the depression. It will create an important addition to the federal and state revenues, and therefore assist the balancing of the budget, permit the reduction of taxes in many jurisdictions, and increase employment. It should also improve public morale.

The President, it is said, intends to urge upon the states the earliest practicable ratification of the repeal amendment submitted by the late congress. The same considerations which support the immediate modification of the Volstead act support prompt repeal of the 18th amendment. The great majority of the nation demands the earliest possible liquidation of the prohibition régime. The states are ready to create a new system of regulation in accordance with their own respective social conditions. The repeal amendment permits such protection of dry states by federal restraint as may be expedient or necessary. The country needs the new revenue and new employment which the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages will produce, and is ready to establish regulations which will be consistent with American principles of government and therefore be more effectual in the control of the liquor traffic.

These reforms should not be unnecessarily delayed. Both economic and social conditions call for their earliest possible accomplishment.

ROOSEVELT'S PERSONAL PARING KNIFE.

[Bloomington Pantagraph.]

While the country was awaiting and commenting upon the appointments to positions in President Roosevelt's cabinet, one after another, one little selection made by F. D. slipped through the press with but minor public interest. And yet this appointment, according to Bertram Snell, Republican floor leader of the house, was "the outstanding appointment made so far by Roosevelt."

It was the selection of Lewis Douglas of Arizona to be director of the budget under the Roosevelt administration. Douglas is a member of the house in Washington, and according to the information concerning him which has been made public since his appointment, he is a man possessing peculiar qualifications for the place he is to fill.

Douglas is 39 years old, making him a much younger man than the average of the members of the Roosevelt cabinet, who average 58.7 years of age. Douglas rides a bicycle, plays some golf and pitches for the baseball team composed of the Democrats in the house. He served in the world war, went to the front, was in the midst of the Argonne bloodshed, and was cited by Pershing for bravery in action.

Douglas is a man of courage, moral as well as physical. Witness his course in congress, when he voted about half the time against the leaders of his own Democratic party on matters of legislation. He was the author of the bill to name a special economy committee in the house, and while the labors of that committee did not accomplish all that was set for it to do, yet its appointment showed that its author had real economy in mind.

The record and personal characteristics of Representative Douglas are taken to mean that when the government makes a serious effort to economize that the right man has been chosen to perform.

It is no mean task which confronts the maker of the budget from the beginning. He starts with a deficit of $1,271,721,000 as of date Jan. 31. It is the custom of the director of the budget to have a conference with the President every week, keeping a sharp eye on receipts and expenditures and letting the President know how the finances are coming on. The confabs between Douglas and President Roosevelt will be snappy affairs, but the public won't have a chance to listen in on them.

The millions of the American people will hope that the new budget director can do what he is chosen to do—pare down government expenditures until at first the budget will be balanced, and then that an era of permanent sanity in federal expenditures may be ushered in.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the quips fall where they may. By F. R.

MAJOR DIG.

Now we'll tell you. The great thorn to us in Mr. Hoover's term as President was that medicine ball thing. The newspapers were always talking about how the President and his guests slung the medicine ball at each other; that the medicine ball cabinet postponed a session on account of rain or how they were regaled on a breakfast of sausage, eggs, and pancakes after fiercely hurling the medicine ball at each other for a strenuous half hour. It wasn't Mr. Hoover, the members of his medicine ball cabinet, on their idea of seeking health and relaxation we objected to; it was the medicine ball. A medicine ball—the sight of one—the merest mention of one—is to us a pain in the neck. It brings up a horrible memory that we have tried for long weary years to forget.

It was away back after the Philippine insurrection it all happened. The war was over, Aguinaldo had been run down and put in the hoosegow, and we were coming home on the Fujiyama Maru. It was the first morning out from Hongkong and the passengers were standing dismally around wondering if any of the other passengers were good enough for them to associate with on the long voyage to San Francisco that Major Dig appeared. That wasn't his real name, but we called him that from the first, because he said we all looked gloomy and we ought to dig out of it, dig out of it right away and dig into some good exercise that would keep the cobwebs off our minds and bring us health and sunshine, but we would have to dig, dig, dig.

Some of the more gloomy minded suggested we might go in for polo and foxhunting, only we had forgotten to bring our saddles and maybe there weren't many horses on board the Fujiyama Maru. That, of course, was intended to squelch Major Dig, but Major Dig was one of those happy, irrepressible souls that simply wouldn't be squelched. "Oh, dig out of it," shouted Major Dig; "we mustn't land in San Francisco all fat and soft. If we don't do something all the exercise most of you fellows will take will be hoisting highballs and cocktails. That will overdevelop the muscles of the right arm and the rest of the body won't get any exercise at all. Come on, now, let's dig into something that will do us some real good and land us back in the U. S. A. as fit as fiddles. Come on, now, what shall we do?" Several things were suggested, but none of them seemed to be very good.

Strangely enough, it was Major Dig himself who thought out the solution to our problem. "I've got it!" suddenly shouted Major Dig, jumping up so excitedly he knocked over two highballs, three Martinis, and four or five miscellaneous drinks on the table. "I've just happened to think of the very thing. That is, if my butler in Manila didn't forget to pack it away in my trunk. Wait." In a moment Major Dig returned and joyfully announced that all was well. His butler had not forgotten. There it was—a medicine ball. "You see," said Major Dig, "a medicine ball gives the finest exercise possible. It's good exercise to begin with, and there's lots of fun playing it. Now, then, everybody on deck and we'll have our first workout."

We all went up on deck and tossed the medicine ball around and decided it was grand sport. Even the confirmed poker players, dice shakers, and ancient sots in the smoking room were convinced it was a good thing, and so many had to play that Major Dig divided us into squads so everybody would be assured of the proper amount of exercise.

It was about the second day out that Major Dig had another wonderful idea. "You know," he said to the crowd in the smoking room that night, "it's the little money we put up on the ship's run every night or that we play for in poker or that we bet on the races that makes those things really interesting. All right, let's give our medicine ball games a little sporting flavor. Whenever we fail to catch the ball when it's thrown at us—well, we'll pay a little fine, say a quarter. How's that?"

Everybody thought it would be great. So the next day we fined ourselves mercilessly, Major Dig appointing himself treasurer and pouncing down like a turkey buzzard on a fat old hen whenever the ball was dropped. That night in the smoking room Major Dig suggested that the money collected in fines should be used in buying a big farewell banquet in San Francisco. Everybody thought that would be great. In order to insure enough money for a splendid dinner, with plenty of champagne, sauterne, port, Scotch, and what not, Major Dig said he would have to stiffen up the fines. He would suggest that each squad have its exact hour set for medicine ball practice and men failing to report on time would be fined—well, say two bits. Everybody thought that was a wonderful idea and it was adopted. As the days went on Major Dig suggested some more things to make the medicine ball game more interesting. It cost a quarter if a player was slow in returning the ball or if he said a swear word if he caught the medicine ball in the stomach instead of in his hands. There were still more penalties added, and finally Major Dig remembered that we hadn't paid any initiation fee when we organized and suggested we each pay five dollars. That hurt a little bit, but Major Dig said of course we would have just so many more delectable things to eat at the banquet and more to drink, so everybody finally consented.

At last we arrived in San Francisco. We had invited the lady passengers and the ship officers to attend the banquet, and that night at eight o'clock we all gathered in the main lobby of the super hotel Major Dig had selected for our banquet. We gathered, but somehow Major Dig was late. Eight-thirty came and still no Major Dig. We asked the hotel clerk where the dinner for the Medicine Ball club of the Fujiyama Maru would be held. The clerk said we could search him; he had never heard of it. There was some consternation, but, of course, the clerk was mistaken. We sent emissaries around to the other hotels to see if our banquet had been arranged somewhere else. No, no arrangements had been made anywhere that we could discover. Nine o'clock came and then we heard a happy shout from the clerk. A messenger had just come in with a package. Major Dig had probably met with an accident and been prevented from arranging the dinner, so he had sent us back our money. With trembling hands we opened the bundle. Out rolled the old medicine ball and on its black surface was neatly painted in large white letters:

DIG! YOU SUCKERS, DIG! R. H. L.

POOR-APPETITE CHILDREN.

THE charge that doctors disagree is partly true—about as true as the lack of agreement between judges on the bench and of lawyers before it; of politicians, merchants, financiers, and economists. The alliteration "listens so easily" that in the popular mind it is given more prominence than it deserves. Occasionally, however, they do manage to agree. One subject that they do not quarrel over in this year of grace is the cause of poor appetite in babies and older children.

They are of one mind on the subject of unimportance of diets. They are agreed that when a child has a poor appetite the cause is not to be sought in the bottle or in the foods set before older children. The fault lies with the child. They even go further and agree that the trouble with the child is on the mental and social side rather than the physical.

Here are some statements on phases of this subject by Dr. D. P. Arnold:

"Children have dominating personalities. A strong element of negativism is present in most children. The older they are the more opinionated they become.

"Two prevailing styles are hard on babies. [The lean mamma and the fat baby styles are what he refers to.]

"Conflicts over food should be avoided from birth and even thereafter. Never force a child to eat anything. Children are creatures of habit. Ease them into new foods."

All of these statements are not true of every child, but if mothers and nurses would bear them in mind there would be fewer mothers complaining that their children eat poorly, fewer changes would be made in foods, and fewer medicines would be given.

A baby is self-centered. He wants to have his way. He resents direction from his nurse and still more from his mother. Every child, at some time or other, in some way or other, is antagonistic to those in authority. This impulse, sometimes called negativism, varies in degree and in its manifestation from one period of life to another.

Many poor-appetite children are so because they resent being forced to eat certain foods or being overly coaxed. If left alone they usually eat pretty well. Most of them eat quite enough. If they are put at table with a group of children who are eating certain foods and saying nothing about it, the poor-appetite child will pitch right in and eat what the others are eating, even though the record shows that the foods now taken were refused when they were offered by the parent or nurse.

After a child has become accustomed to certain foods he is likely to object to trying foods that are new to him. To get him to taste the new foods requires a little finesse. To combine a distasteful medicine with any food is to invite disaster. It often leads to forcing. It brings about unpleasant association of ideas which may be extended to other foods or to all foods offered by the parent or nurse.

WASH WITH WARM VINEGAR.

Mrs. J. C. F. writes: How can I get rid of an enormous amount of nits in the hair of my 4 year old daughter? It is only recently that she has acquired this.

REPLY.

Wash the hair with warm vinegar. Promptly comb, using a fine tooth comb. This is the best method for nits removal. Are you certain as to what these particles are? Could it be dandruff? If you are right, remember that one female left behind will shortly deposit another supply of nits.

SEVERAL MEANINGS.

Mrs. M. O. P. writes: I have a sister, 36 years old, who is suffering with neurosis. Is neurosis a nervous breakdown or is it a mental condition? Does it come from a weak heart or does it affect the heart? Is it very serious?

REPLY.

Among the definitions of neurosis are "any form of nervousness," "irritability of the nervous system," "a functional nervous disease; one dependent on no evident lesion." Therefore, when a patient is told she has a neurosis she has heard some words but she has no information. There are heart symptoms that can be said to be a neurosis. A nervous or irritable heart is one. But why use the general term? Nervous heart is vague and meaningless enough.

GAINING WEIGHT.

J. S. writes:

1. I am 18 years old, 6 feet 3 inches, and weigh 160 pounds. Can I gain weight?
2. How much should I weigh?
3. Does sleep add weight?

REPLY.

1. You will probably continue to gain weight for several years regardless of what you do. That is a part of the program of growth. You can help out by sleeping regular hours, going to bed early, and leading a calm life. Eating properly helps. A bowl of sugared milk and crackers at bedtime is of service.
2. About 170 pounds.
3. It helps.

QUARANTINE REGULATIONS.

Chicago, March 5.—[Friend of the People.]—The apartment opposite us is quarantined with chicken pox, but the man goes in and out every night. Recently they were quarantined with scarlet fever and he did the same thing. This is unfair to us in the building who have children. J. D. P.

Please be advised that the regulations of the Illinois department of public health, under which we operate, do not require the quarantine of any one but the patient in a case of chicken pox, so that any other person belonging to the family in question had a right to enter and leave the premises referred to.

In connection with the scarlet fever case at the same address, I wish to say that our inspector made several visits to the premises but found no evidence of lax quarantine.

HERMAN N. BUNDESEN,
President Board of Health.

REAL ESTATE CONTRACT.

Chicago, March 2.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My father, who was in temporary difficulties, signed over his house to my two married sisters, who in turn made payments on this house in the amount of $800. There still remained a $1,300 mortgage on it. My two sisters asked me to buy this mortgage and to make the necessary improvements on the property. With this idea in mind I made improvements amounting to $700, paying my sisters' husbands for doing the work. Later, however, when I went to buy the mortgage I found that my two sisters had bought it two days before. In other words, they merely tricked me into improving their property. I hold receipts for the labor and material in my own name. Under the laws of Illinois what are my rights in this case and what course of action should be taken? M. C.

The statute of frauds requires that contracts relating to real estate, in order to be enforcible, must be signed by the parties to be charged. Hence, it appears probable that you are not in a position to enforce any rights in the real estate, but you are in a position to collect the fair value of your services and advances. We suggest that you employ an attorney.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BUILDING RECEIVERSHIP.

Chicago, March 6.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. The receiver appointed by a "master" of the superior court has had charge of a building for over a year, during which time he deposited money collected for rents in a bank which closed. The account was in the name of the individual as receiver. 2. If a demand is made upon the receiver of the closed bank, can he pay the receiver who has the money on deposit? D. Y.

1. Receivers are appointed by the judges rather than by the master.
2. We see no basis for treating the claim as preferred.

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

MARCH 11, 1917.

CHICAGO.—A national railway strike is again threatened. Assurances have been sent to President Wilson, however, that if the country becomes involved in the war the renewed demands of the railway employés will not be pressed. Escaping actual embroilment in the hostilities, the demands, held up for the last several months, will be forced to an issue. An announcement was made that the four big railroad brotherhoods have asked for a meeting with the national conference committee of the railroads in New York on March 15, regardless of whether the United States Supreme court will have handed down a decision on the Adamson law by that time.

WASHINGTON.—"If arms are not sufficient to protect American ships from unlawful attacks by German submarines it will be necessary to adopt more forceful measures." In these words one of the highest government officials indicated that there is to be no turning back by the administration from the course upon which it has embarked in dealing with Germany. The President in ordering the arming of American ships has acted advisedly and in full realization of the fact that war with Germany now becomes a grave possibility, if not a probability. The arming of American ships is now going forward, and within a few days these vessels will be upon the high seas, prepared to defend themselves. The government is prepared to defend the act of an American merchantman in firing at sight upon a German submarine. It is held that proximity of a submarine to a merchantman establishes hostile intent, in view of Germany's declaration that no ships will be given warning henceforth, and of Austria's declaration that even defensively armed merchantmen will be treated as pirates.

LONDON.—The British troops north of the Ancre advanced along a front of three miles northeast of Miraumont and captured the village of Irles and its neighboring defenses and swept in a large number of prisoners and fifteen machine guns. The fall of Irles clears the way for an attack on Grevillers and the Loupart wood, the last remaining western defenses of Bapaume, the German base of operations, and therefore constitutes an extremely important strategic victory. Fighting between the French and the Germans on the Champagne and Verdun fronts was almost as savage as that on the Ancre battle line. The terrific struggle under blizzard conditions which has been going on in the Champagne for three days developed into sweeping strokes by both sides yesterday. On the left wing of the Maisons de Champagne line the opposing forces seesawed back and forth for hours until the French finally succeeded in ejecting the enemy from the position as a whole and in dashing forward for a substantial gain.

OTHER WAR NEWS.—Petrograd reports the Russians have captured Senne and other Turkish positions in that vicinity. The British are engaged in battle with the Turks on the Diala river line, six miles south of Bagdad. Three of the quartet accused of conspiracy to kill Premier Lloyd George by poison were found guilty and received prison sentences. The fourth man was freed.

LONDON.—A big drop in the meat prices throughout the United States may be expected if today's action of the British food controller is carried out. The Chicago meat packers and the American interests dominating the meat production of the world will be the hardest hit. Under the sanction of Lord Davenport, the food controller, the London and provincial produce exchanges have drawn a list of maximum prices for meats, and they have agreed that these prices shall not be exceeded in the United Kingdom.

NEW YORK.—The White Star line steamship Adriatic, which left Liverpool March 1, arrived today with 278 passengers. Officers of the ship said that the German submarine zone was crossed without unusual incident.

NEW YORK.—Federal agents investigating alleged German plots in this city and vicinity declared they have obtained evidence proving that accredited German agents have been levying war taxes on German subjects in the United States for more than a year. One of these German "assessors," the agents declared, has told them his part in the collection. Millions of dollars, the agents believe, have been collected.

CHICAGO.—Armed with evidence of an alleged food "pool," through which prices and distribution of foodstuffs are said to be regulated by certain South Water street firms, Robert W. Childs, special assistant attorney general, left for Washington to lay this evidence before Attorney General Gregory. The evidence is said to involve several of the largest produce dealers in Chicago.

CANDIDATES.

Chicago, March 7.—The tragic death of Mayor Cermak has left a gap in the administration of our city. It is imperative that an able and courageous man be selected for the important post of World's Fair mayor.

May I suggest the following men as best fitted for that office: William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools; Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago; Arthur F. Albert, former mayoral candidate; Prof. Paul H. Douglas of the University of Chicago, or Prof. Charles E. Merriam.

The aforementioned are capable of giving an honest, efficient administration and are free from the taint of politics and big business. DAVID MANNING.

FOR WOODHULL.

Chicago, March 7.—We must begin to look for a man to put in Mayor Cermak's place. Mayor Cermak had such a man for his friend, a Democrat, who polled as many Republican votes as many Republicans, who, when head of the finance committee of the council, made an honorable record, and since he has been sanitary trustee, on the finance committee, has done nobly with that job. Why not put Ross A. Woodhull in as mayor? He could carry the burden of the city hall and as World's Fair mayor be an honor to us. J. B.

FOR JUDGE JOHNSON.

Chicago, March 7.—Now that we have lost our leader who has accomplished much in redeeming the name of our good city, it will be necessary for us [the citizens] to look forward and select a man with a backbone as strong as the Rock of Gibraltar to carry on. At no time has it been of more vital importance to nation, state and city to look for a leader without regard to party lines as our next mayor.

The man who has proven his worth, who has shown his honesty, who performed his duties without fear and favor and with courage in all his undertakings is none other than former Federal Judge George E. Q. Johnson. Let us get together and draft him. A. C. M.

FOR BUNDESEN.

Chicago, March 7.—We need a strong man to carry on the unfinished work of Anton J. Cermak. Why not Herman N. Bundesen who is close to the people and a universal favorite with them, as the last election would have demonstrated if he had remained in the race?

G. M. JENKINS.

OTHER CANDIDATES.

Chicago, March 6.—Party lines mean nothing in this crisis and a nonpartisan man should be urged to run for mayor. A man afraid of no one, a man with a background of training which has made him an honest, fearless man of ability. A man of the caliber of A. A. Sprague, R. I. Randolph, George Getz, D. F. Kelly, Fred Sargent, and a few others. I hope we voters will not have to cast our vote for the lesser of two evils, which is the usual case, but for a man not selected by the machine of either the Republican or Democratic party. CARL A. METZ.

THE COURTEOUS SEX.

Chicago, March 6.—Might I express my gratitude to the two ladies that came to our aid in getting my car started Sunday when visiting in Waukegan? I hailed several men drivers, but none but these ladies would help me. I hope that our Chicago hospitality will equal that of those Waukegan women. I am very grateful to them. CARL C. LUDWIG.

NORTHERN WISCONSIN FARMS.

Loretta, Wis., March 7.—Residing in a pioneer settlement of northern Wisconsin, I must correct the statement of E. E. Terrell, Hazelhurst, in your issue of Feb. 26, that "northern Wisconsin is not now, and never will be, a farming section."

Official soil maps of the state and federal government show that most of the land in northern Wisconsin is fertile; the publications describe crops and methods adapted to the productive types, and point out the poor soils.

Weather bureau reports give ample rainfall and favorable temperatures.

Official crop reports tabulate yields for counties and, except in corn for the crib, our northern counties compare well with different parts of this and other states, excepting localities practicing irrigation.

A ten year average of land cleared will show more than 65,000 acres annually brought into cultivation, which does not include land converted into pasture.

Splendid progress is being made in further classifying lands for their best use.

The quality of live stock shows great improvement over ten years ago; this also is true of seed grains and potatoes.

Good roads have been made better.

Development of power appliances and machines has made easier the tasks of field, yard, and home.

Tax delinquency of wild land is increasing, but the worst that might happen would be that the county would own the county; such lands do not revert to the state.

Almost without exception, every time the federal government takes a census each northern county shows increase in the amount of land in farms, in number of farms, in cultivated land, in value of farm buildings, farm tools, and number of farm animals, as well as increase in population. B. G. PACKER.

DAUNTLESS YOUTH.

East Moline, Ill., March 6.—I read in SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE, March 5, that a certain party bemoans the fact that no American can take the speed record on land away from Sir Malcolm Campbell of England. Rats!

I'm 21 years old and in excellent health. Give me an automobile that will go 400 miles an hour and the United States will regain the record.

Unfortunately I'm badly bent, if not clear broke, and most every one is at present; but my nerves and spirit are still o. k. and it burns me up to have reflections cast upon the courage of American youth of today.

M. LE ROY WILLIAMS.

ATTABOY.

Lisle, Ill., March 7.—THE CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE and THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE are the only reading matter I can afford to buy these days, but I certainly do get my money's worth out of them both. I read THE TRIBUNE thoroughly every day, including many of the want ads and advertisements, and I do enjoy it. THE TRIBUNE is not a scandal sheet. I believe it prints the news accurately and it certainly does so in an interesting manner.

I do not believe there is a better way to keep yourself well informed on the current history of the world than to read THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

ALGER S. BARNARD.

WELCOME.

Waukegan, Ill., March 6.—A new President inaugurated, a good old fashioned back slapping welcome by the press, radio and public, and six months from now some good old pants kicking by the same folks; just good old grateful hospitality of American patriots.

HITLER ORDERS NAZI TROOPS TO END TERRORISM

Aid Refuses to Let Police Protect Jewish Merchants

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, March 10.—Chancellor Adolf Hitler tonight ordered his Nazi storm troops to stop molesting foreigners and to refrain from interfering with the business life of the nation.

While Hitler was sounding his appeal, Capt. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Nazi commissioner for the Prussian ministry of interior, announced that the police never would be used "as protective troops for Jewish merchants."

"Since Monday I have been bombarded by telephone calls and telegrams concerning the boycotting of Jewish stores," Capt. Goering continued. "I will not permit the police to act as a guard for stores owned by Jews. The police will continue to protect all honest persons, but not racketeers, swindlers, and usurers."

Orders Peace and Discipline.

Hitler in his proclamation ordered his followers to observe peace and discipline.

"A gigantic evolution has taken place in Germany, the result of the heaviest fighting and most tenacious endurance, but also of the highest discipline," he said. "Conscienceless rascals, chiefly communist provokers, are trying to compromise our party by individual deeds which have no connection with the great work of national resurrection, but solely tend to blemish the achievements of our movement.

"The attempt is made especially to bring the party or Germany into conflict with foreign countries by molesting foreigners and automobiles flying foreign flags. You storm tropers must at once seize such disturbers, arrest them, and surrender them to the police."

Storm troopers blockaded big Jewish owned department stores and other business houses in the west end of Berlin today. The troops stood shoulder to shoulder to prevent prospective customers from entering.

Meanwhile in Bavaria the last anti-Nazi stronghold to capitulate to Hitler, Gen. Franz von Epp, as federal commissioner, took over the police force of the state. He ordered the arrest of all communist and republican leaders. Storm troopers were commanded to supplement the regular police.

Nazis Seize Cabinet Member.

The official residence of Dr. Steutzel, Bavarian minister of interior, was entered last night by storm troopers who forced their way to a bedroom occupied by Steutzel and his wife. They ordered the minister to accompany them to police headquarters. Steutzel refused. The troopers then forced him to enter an auto clad only in an overcoat. He was driven to the "Brown House," National Socialist headquarters, where he was manhandled.

Later State Councilor Fritz Schaeffer, president of the Bavarian People's party, was forced from his bed by Nazis and taken to the Nazi headquarters. The officials were released several hours later with the explanation that their arrests were ordered by the local storm troop leader, who sought to question them concerning alleged orders to the police.

Thousands of communists who have been imprisoned throughout the nation will be placed in detention camps at hard labor, Dr. Wilhelm Frick, Nazi minister of interior, announced today.

"When the reichstag convenes on March 21," he said, "communists will be kept from the session by the most urgent and useful tactics. These gentlemen must again get accustomed to fruitful work."

Catholic Papers Banned.

Hitler's government also renewed its war against the Catholic press. Police at Cologne suspended the Centrist newspapers Kosinische Volkszeitung and the Lokal-Anzeiger for three days. A Centrist rally was also prohibited.

The entire Catholic press of German Upper Silesia was banned until March 15. Eight newspapers are affected by the order.

The Centrist party has complained to President Paul von Hindenburg as the result of an attack on Carl Ulitzka, a papal prelate who is a member of the reichstag, at Gleiwitz last night. He was badly beaten when 200 men in Nazi uniforms broke up a Centrist meeting which he was addressing.

The Berliner Tageblatt, one of the capital's best known newspapers, also was suspended today until March 13 for having published articles objectionable to the government.

Five persons were reported killed today. Bodies of three young men were found at a lake resort 20 miles from Berlin. It is not known whether they were victims of a political fight. A Socialist newspaper publisher at Chemnitz was shot to death when he resisted storm troopers who invaded his office. At Brunswick one person was killed when a Socialist clubhouse was raided by police.

NEW CABINET IN GREECE TAKES OATH OF OFFICE

ATHENS, Greece, March 10.—(AP)—Premier Tsaldaris, royalist party leader, who pledged allegiance to the republic last fall, and his new cabinet took the oath of office today.

Tsaldaris was victor in Sunday's election of a new assembly over former Premier Venizelos, but he was prevented momentarily from becoming premier when Gen. Plastiras established a dictatorship.

The Tsaldaris cabinet is practically the same as his previous coalition ministry, which lasted ten weeks after last September's election, except that the foreign minister is former Governor Maximos of the National bank. He is going to London to negotiate with foreign bondholders in connection with the government debt. The new chamber will meet March 27.

Effort to Settle Irish Rail Strike Ends in Failure

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, March 10.—(AP)—Efforts to settle a strike which has been going on for nearly two months on the Northern Ireland railways ended in a deadlock today. The strike will continue.

FRANCE PLANS PROTEST AGAINST HITLER'S ACTIONS

Charges Nazis Violate Versailles Treaty.

PARIS, March 10.—(AP)—Diplomatic protests against the occupation by Adolf Hitler's Nazis of the barracks at Kehl and against the legalizing of the Nazi Brown Shirts became a possibility today after an all day conference attended by the heads of the French and British governments.

Dispatches from Strasbourg announced that 500 Nazis occupied the demilitarized Kehl barracks yesterday and raised the Nazi swastika flag. Kehl is on the right bank of the Rhine in Baden, three miles east of Strasbourg.

Premier Daladier and Foreign Minister Paul-Boncour of France informed Prime Minister MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Sir John Simon of Great Britain that the French considered the Kehl occupation and the legalizing of the Brown Shirts as violations of the treaty of Versailles.

[The Nazi storm troopers in Germany recently were made supplemental police officers.]

Interallied debts and the repercussions from the American banking crisis were discussed by the French and British statesmen, it was understood. It was decided that the governments will keep one another informed when war debt negotiations with the United States begin.

The French conferees laid before the British representatives the gravity of a possible armament race in the event of the failure of the disarmament conference at Geneva. Mr. MacDonald and his foreign secretary are en route to Geneva in an effort to save the conference.

The participants in the meeting today separated, it was said, with every intention to do their utmost to preserve peace.

Premier Daladier probably will go to Geneva early next week. Sir John said, as the British party departed for Geneva tonight, that "we are all very much pleased but have not decided the exact course we expect to take."

Nazis Evacuate Kehl.

STRASBOURG, France, March 10.—(AP)—Nazi forces which occupied the barracks at Kehl yesterday were reported today to have evacuated the place and dispersed. They hoisted the German imperial and the Hitlerite flags before their departure.

TRIES TO ESCAPE; SHOT.

Frank Cadwey, 33 years old, arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing from railroad cars, was shot in the left thigh yesterday by Policeman Michael Cullinan of the Wabash avenue station when he attempted to escape.

RUSSIA TO FEED HUNGRY FARMERS "IF THEY WORK"

Caucasus Gets Threat of Starvation.

MOSCOW, March 10.—(AP)—The soviet government now is feeding some of the peasantry in the north Caucasus region, where the agrarian situation is acute because of failure of last year's crops, due to reluctance of the farmers to produce.

The action, following a recent government decree granting seed loans for spring planting in the north Caucasus and the Ukraine, was revealed only casually in a provincial newspaper reaching here today from Rostov-on-Don.

The north Caucasus regional communist party committee, the newspaper revealed, had threatened a stoppage "of food assistance" as one of the measures taken against collective farms and villages failing in proper preparations for planting.

"Food where needed will be allowed only to those showing diligent work," the edict added.

This was the first open acknowledgement that the state had been compelled to go to the assistance of farmers in this respect, although there have been indications for some time that a large section of the peasantry in the chief grain producing areas were in sore straits traceable to the government's recently abandoned system of collections.

How long the feeding has been in progress and the number of persons affected was not revealed. It was pointed out that in a number of districts and villages, as well as collective farms, tractor stations were poorly prepared for spring planting.

The party committee gave the backward units ten days to improve their work. Otherwise they will face dissolution of the collective farms, distribution of their lands and property to worthier workers, and exile of the entire offending populations.

One whole village and three collective farms were placed on the dreaded "black board" as a warning, accompanied by the withdrawal of the government's food doles and loans for seed and fodder.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS BLOCK HIGHWAYS TO CURB THE IDLE

VIENNA, March 10.—(AP)—Federal troops and gendarmes occupied Neunkirchen, near the industrial center of Wiener Neustadt, today after a report that the idle were organizing for a march from Ternitz.

Machine guns and barbed wire were placed across the highways. Up until 1 p. m., however, no serious clashes were reported. A group of 1,200 marchers was easily dispersed.

The situation in Vienna was quiet and the streets presented a normal appearance. Most of the morning newspapers did not even mention the presence of troops in Vienna. The newspapers, however, are under strict regulation.

30 Russians Reported Shot for Fire in Lumber Depot

BERLIN, March 10.—(AP)—The newspaper Boersen Zeitung today quoted the newspaper Aftenposten of Oslo, Norway, which carried a dispatch from Archangel, Russia, that a large lumber depot there had been afire fourteen days and that thirty persons accused of being counter revolutionaries had been shot.

CUBS LOSE, 5 TO 3; GIANTS POUND WARNEKE

Places Eleven Men, Indiana Eight.

List of Qualifiers

Michigan	11	Illinois	3
Indiana	8	Wisconsin	2
Ohio State	6	Northwestern	1
Purdue	5	Minnesota	1
Chicago	2

Michigan's track squad qualified eleven men for the Big Ten indoor track championship to be decided tonight at the University of Chicago fieldhouse during the course of preliminaries held in five events at the Midway last night. Indiana, defending champion, placed eight men and thereby served notice that it will not relinquish the title without a struggle.

Finals in ten events will be held tonight, beginning at 8 o'clock.

The Wolverine team placed two men in four of the five events for which trials were necessary and three men in the fifth. The Hoosiers qualified two in each of four races. Six Ohio State men and five from Purdue survived.

Scheifley Fails to Qualify.

No unusual times were recorded during the evening. With one exception, all of the head liners qualified without undue strain. The exception was Charles Scheifley of Minnesota, one of the best of the hurdlers, who tipped over two barriers and was disqualified.

Charles Hornbostel, Indiana's candidate for high point honors, led the qualifiers to the tape in two events, the 880 in which he is the defending champion, and the mile. The slim Hoosier covered the half mile in 2:01.3 shortly after he had won the mile in 4:29.3. Indiana counts on Hornbostel to pick up at least nine points in these two events tonight. The strain of last night's endeavor did not seem to wear him down.

Duggins Pushes De Baker.

Michigan's entrants took their qualifying chores in easy fashion. Capt. Charles De Baker was the only Wolverine to lead in his event. De Baker was forced to extend himself to take the second semi-final heat of the 440 in :51.8 from Duggins of Northwestern.

Jack Keller of Ohio State was yards ahead of his field in the high hurdles and his heat was 3-10ths of a second faster than the time set in any of the other three trials. Another Buckeye, Walter Stapf, a sophomore, who had not figured in the advance notices, established himself as a certain place winner in the 60 yard dash when he led the qualifiers with a time of :06.3. Other heat winners in this event were Bennett of Ohio State in :06 5, Ward of Michigan in :06.4, and Thomton of Minnesota in :06.4.

Watson Leads Two Milers.

In addition to finals in these events, tonight's competition will be in the two mile, the one mile relay, the high jump, the shotput, and the pole vault. Cliff Watson of Indiana is the class of the two milers, but Michigan will counterbalance this with a certain victory in the high jump, in which Willis Ward is likely to crack the existing record of six feet five inches, and an almost certain victory in the relay.

Illinois, though qualifying only three men last night, is a good prospect for third or fourth place honors in the meet, since Dave Cook and Chinn Kamm are likely to place high in the shotput, and Seeley and Lennington may be one-two in the pole vault.

Scheifley Helps Michigan.

Scheifley's disqualification last night may help Michigan, since the Wolverines will now have a better chance of placing both Egleston and Pantlind in the hurdles event. Egleston won his heat at :09.1 last night, while Pantlind was a close second to Sandbach of Purdue, at nine even in another heat.

Much of Indiana's hope will depend upon Fuqua's effort to conquer De Baker in the 440 in what promises to be the race of the evening. Summaries:

ARRIVED SAFELY.

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla., March 10.—Friend Arch: Well, Arch, I suppose that, chronologically speaking, this letter should have been sent before the one in which I told you about the bank holiday because I forgot to tell you in that letter that I arrived safely or, in the light of subsequent events, that I was safe (financially) until I arrived. However, I figured you would know I arrived, else how could I write you?

The cottage was modest and comfortable, as Mrs. Wake had wired me, and, before I forget it, the shower bath is inside the house, not like the one we last had, where the bath was on the back porch, which wasn't inclosed. But I will tell you about living conditions here another time because I want to tell you about some of your friends I already have bumped into in this small city of about 15,000 (winter population) which is twenty miles north of Miami Beach.

First, there's our mutual golf friend, Jack Douglass of Barrington, and his wife, who formerly was a big shot in the Western Women's Golf association. I ran across them the first day along with R. D. (Bob) Cunningham, who's part owner of the Wilmette and Pick wick golf courses up home.

Bob and Joe Roseman did have a lease on the municipally-owned links here, which with an elaborate club house set the town back about $250,000 in boom days. Bob and Joe had the lease for $1 a year and could make a go of it in winter, but the lease provided the lessors must keep it up all summer for the year round residents, too, and maintenance cost so much they couldn't earn the $1 rent, so tney gave it back. So now Bob's just fishing and going to the dogs.

When I say going to the dogs I mean the dog tracks, where he has been very successful. He has a new system. When he went out the first time he used his noodle. They have what they call a quinella, a variation of the daily double, by which you pick the dogs which will run one-two or two-one. Bob says, "I figured I didn't know anything about the dogs anyway, so it would be just as easy to pick two as one." Well, his first shot he cashed and got $145 for his $2. He's been playing on velvet ever since. I've seen a great deal of Bob ever since the bank moratorium and intend to keep on seeing a great deal of him as long as his system works, and I've written his son at Northwestern to send our fraternity distress signal so his dad will recognize it when I flash it on him.

Then, riding around sightseeing one day, who should we see on the porch of a swell home but Jack Huff, owner of the Lincoln Tavern. Jack lives here the greater part of the year, but will leave in a couple of months to open up his place on Dempster street. I haven't broached the subject of a currency touch to him yet until I get better acquainted, but he might take an Evanston check. How well do you know him?

Another time I was riding through town and I saw a fellow I thought I knew and it was Harry Farnham. Harry used to go to school with me over on the west side many years ago and has been prominent in Chicago real estate operations ever since. I asked him what he was doing and he said, "I'm going to live here until real estate picks up at home." And I said, "What's this building?" and he said, "O, I picked up the lot for a song and I'm putting a permanent residence on it," and then he showed me through. I didn't think that sounded so good for his impressions of Chicago real estate because he's going to North Carolina instead of Chicago this summer.

Then in a cottage back of us on the next street is George Vinton of Edgewater, who plays golf at Wilmette. I don't remember whether you ever played in our foursome or not. He's down here waiting until the office supply business picks up because he's interested in Yawman-Erbe company and he doesn't know when he's going home, either. As a matter of fact, Arch, I don't know when we're going home, but that depends on the moratorium, and I'll take that up with you later.

Well, Arch, I've got to go over to the grocery now to see if the lady, who's from Indiana, will exchange one of her coupon books good for $10 in trade for a $10 A. B. A. check. This grocery gives $10 in prizes every week on drawings like our Elrma in Evanston. Only what good would it do us to win? She'd probably give us back our travelers' check and I couldn't very well refuse it, and one can't eat travelers' checks.

This is a rather short letter, but I'll write again soon, only I wanted you to know I arrived safely. Regards.

HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Yankees and Gehrig Reach Salary Accord

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 10.—[Special.]—Lou Gehrig, slugging first baseman of the Yankees and Babe Ruth's famous home run twin, today signed his contract in New York and will come immediately to St. Petersburg. He will be here Sunday. Joe McCarthy, Yankee manager, received the news from Ed Barrow in New York just as the team was beginning daily practice.

The club could afford to lose Gehrig even less than Ruth. Lou still is at the top of his game, while Ruth is in the twilight of his career.

It is believed that the club and Gehrig compromised on the salary dispute. Lou was asked to take a 33 1-3 per cent cut. He was getting about $30,000 and is believed to have signed for about $25,000. Terms were not divulged.

The signing of Gehrig leaves Babe Ruth the only unsigned member of the Yankee squad. It is believed that he will arrange his salary difficulty with Col. Ruppert, president of the club, who is due here Sunday.

PIRATES WHIP SEALS, 2-1.

San Francisco, Cal., March 10.—(AP)—Pittsburgh's Pirates defeated San Francisco's Seals, 2 to 1, today in the opening exhibition game of the season. The Pirates won the game in the ninth when Hall Finney, catcher, singled to center to score a runner. Ralph Birkofer, recruit lefthander, pitched the first five innings for the major leaguers and made a good impression. Leon Chagnon, regular, finished the game.

The rookies were trailing, 4 to 0, in the fourth when Hunt hit his homer with Art Shires on base. Horace Ford and Dutch Holland also scored in that inning. All of the regulars' runs were made in the previous inning when Baxter Jordan tripled, with the bases filled.

SOX AND CUBS FIND THEY'RE REALLY RATTLED

Forget Baseball When Hotels Start Rocking.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—Members of the Chicago White Sox and the Chicago Cubs were safe but considerably shaken tonight.

The Sox, in their hotel at Pasadena, and the Cubs, in their quarters here, were still trembling late tonight as a result of the series of earthquake shocks that rocked southern California early this evening, and the general topic of baseball was forgotten in the all engrossing subject of earth tremors.

The Sox hotel at Pasadena began rocking shortly before 6 o'clock and most of the athletes, never having experienced the sensation, thrust inquiring heads out of their bedroom doors to determine the cause of the commotion. Elderly ladies in various stages of dishabille hobbled up and down the corridors crying "Earthquake."

Fonseca Dives to Safety.

The Sox, most of them half clad, joined in the procession, but the only severe tremor felt there was of such short duration that they returned to their rooms. Lew Fonseca, the Sox manager, who was in the San Francisco earthquake of 1906, said tonight's shocks were of greater intensity but not as prolonged as those which ruined his home city. Nevertheless, he was crawling under his bed when the hotel ceased to sway and settled back into its customary stability.

Charley Berry, the Sox catcher, was in the Turkish bath when the first shock struck the building. His attendant remarked, "We better get out of here," and he got, leaving Charley on the table. Berry wrapped himself in a sheet and almost reached the exit into the street when the disturbance ceased.

Hotel Rocks Like a Boat.

The Cubs and the New York Giants, who are staying at the same hotel, were in their rooms on the top floor of the structure when the building began to rock like a houseboat in a heavy sea. Several of them remarked that they didn't expect to settle down sufficiently to get a hit during the remainder of their stay on the Pacific coast.

The White Sox pitching staff, from the ace member down to the humblest rookie, received Manager Fonseca's attention today. He issued a blanket order calling for the appearance of the entire 15 pitchers. Each candidate was treated to about 10 minutes on the mound and as there are no sore arms among them, they were told to do something more than merely lob the ball up to the plate.

The condition of all the pitchers who have a chance to remain on the list after the season opens is so satisfactory that there is reason to be hopeful of their success for at least the first two weeks of the pennant race.

Exhibition Campaign Opens.

The regular spring exhibition campaign opens tomorrow. The opposition in the opener, as well as on Sunday, will be the Pasadena Merchants nine, which will at least serve to polish up the team play as well as furnish some of the pitchers with serious work.

For tomorrow's game pitching duties will be shared by Milt Gaston, George Murray and Joe Heving. Gaston has had no hand in the two intra-camp battles already held, but has been exercising freely inside of a rubber shirt, so he should have no trouble with the semi-pros. On Sunday the pitching will be handled by Durham, Frasier and Jones or Wilson.

CATALINA NOT DAMAGED

Philip K. Wrigley, president of the William Wrigley Jr. company and owner of the Chicago Cubs, last night reported he had reached Catalina island by long distance telephone to learn reports that the island had been shaken by quakes and visited by a tidal wave were unfounded.

"I was told there were no shocks on the island and that it had not been engulfed by a tidal wave," he said. "Communications were not disturbed. Some worry was expressed for the ball players who left Avalon and are now in Los Angeles, but I understand the shocks were less severe in that city than in the area to the south."

FAVORITES WIN IN EARLY ROUNDS OF PING-PONG MEET

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Ping-pong players from north, south, east, and west gathered last night in the Palmer house ballroom to begin competition for the national championship. Favorites came through the early rounds consistently, but there were just enough upsets to hold the interest of the crowd, which filled the galleries almost to capacity.

Coleman Clark of Chicago, the defending champion, brushed aside Albert T. Bruin in his first engagement of the evening, 21-5, 21-7, 21-8, and went on to win his second round match from Banford Cochrane, 21-16, 21-14, 21-10. Both Bruin and Cochrane are Chicago players.

Svigals Is Beaten.

The only seeded player to be defeated in a first round match was Ed Svigals of Madison, Wis., who was runner-up for the national championship in 1931. Morris Cohn of Chicago turned the trick, 21-13, 21-16, 21-19.

Abraham Krakauer of New York, who finished second to Clark in last year's national championship tournament, went through a spirited encounter with Robert Baity of Chicago and won by a score of 23-21, 21-8, 21-17.

Johnny Lehman, former western amateur golf champion, proved that he is almost as much at home at a ping-pong table as he is on the links. He eliminated H. C. Herzog of Milwaukee, 21-19, 21-14, and 21-10. George Jennings Jr., who is well known on the tennis courts, emerged victorious after being forced to five games by Frank Lotito. The scores were 21-11, 18-21, 17-21, 21-12, and 21-16.

Miss Ovenden Wins.

For the first time the women's national championship will be decided in this tournament, which is sponsored by the Interfraternity club of Chicago. The women favorites also came through their early matches without great difficulty.

Helen Ovenden of Chicago, the western champion, eliminated Bernice Salstrom, 21-13, 21-10; Anita Currey, Omaha champion, defeated Lucille Gottschalk, 21-14, 21-17, and Mrs. Katherine Hammond of Highland Park, Chicago district champion, defeated Verona Lindeman, 21-7, 21-9.

Play will continue tomorrow afternoon and evening and the championship will be decided in the finals Sunday afternoon. Summaries of the seeded players' matches follow:

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—[Special.]—The New York Giants this afternoon accomplished something they couldn't put over all last summer. They licked Lonnie Warneke. The final score was: Giants, 5; Cubs, 3, and the first four New York runs came across during a blasting bee in the second inning.

The game was the first of the 28 exhibition games scheduled for the National league champs on the mainland of the United States and was attended by 2,500 persons, most of whom got a hold of some cash money, somehow or other.

The fellows who assaulted Mr. Warneke in the second inning foray were not the only bearers of thorns. Blondie Ryan, who trained with the White Sox last spring, performed most wickedly at shortstop, accepting 14 chances, half of which wrought great havoc to the Cub cause at times when production seemed imminent.

Giants Again Today.

Though the first game of the Cubs' pay as you enter exhibition season, it was the third 1933 Cub-Giant encounter, the Cubs having won on Catalina island, 10 to 2 and 3 to 2. The teams will play again tomorrow and Sunday, pause while the Cubs play the Los Angeles Angels Monday, and resume with the training season finals here Tuesday.

The Cubs were the first to score, Capt. Woody English arriving at home in the first inning. He doubled with one out, advanced on Cuyler's out, and scored on an infield single by Babe Herman, the first of Babe's three hits.

Ott opened the attack on Lon in the second inning. Mel singled to left and lingered while Ryan was called out on strikes. Verges then smashed a home run over the left field wall. Ott scoring ahead of him. Mancuso doubled and stopped at third when Schumacher knocked a single off Lon. Critz followed with a fly to Babe Herman, Mancuso scoring after the catch. Davis, who had wasted a double in the first inning, hit another, sending Schumacher home with what proved to be the winning run.

Cubs' Hope Fade.

The Cubs filled the bases in the fourth inning when Babe Herman, H. Taylor and Hartnett got walks before the light went out on one of Ryan's frisky plays.

In the fourth inning Cub hopes were lifted when Bill Herman drove a home run over the left field fence with one out. English then walked and Cuyler was safe on an error, but two force plays halted this threat.

Again in the sixth the Cubs became hopeful when H. Taylor and Jurges singled. But again Ryan was omnipresent and that hape went aglimmering.

The seventh inning netted a run, but the tying run died on third. English opened the inning with his second double and went to third while Ryan was throwing out Cuyler. Babe Herman doubled off the left field wall, scoring English. Babe got to third while Ryan was throwing out Stephenson, but H. Taylor struck out.

Henshaw Shows Stuff.

Warneke retired after pitching five innings, giving Roy Henshaw a chance to further boost his rapidly rising stock. The former University of Chicago midget pitched two shutout innings and in the eighth showed his mettle by pitching his way out of a heavy jam.

Ryan singled with one out and stopped at second on Verges' single. Mancuso made it three singles in a row, Ryan scoring. Verges going to third and Mancuso to second on a throw to the plate. Henshaw then ran the count to 3 and 2 on Smith, after which he whizzed over a third strike. He also made it 3 and 2 on James and repeated by slipping over a third strike.

In the game tomorrow Bush and Hubbell will be the starting pitchers.

Baker Replaces Saltis Monday at White City

Rosy [Kid] Baker, Indianapolis middleweight, will replace Bud Saltis against Marty Sampson in an eight round bout at White City Monday night. Saltis was taken off the card when he pleaded an injury to his arm.

Baker will arrive tomorrow. Sampson finished boxing yesterday by going four rounds—two with Danny Delmont, west side junior welterweight who faces Dick Sisk at the Cicero Stadium next Friday.

Rosy will be making his first Chicago appearance in more than a year. He engaged in several bouts at White City. The Indianapolis fighter gave Young Stuhley a hard battle at Indianapolis last year.

Jackie Sharkey, Minneapolis featherweight, will make his first appearance since he fought Johnny Pena at the Washington boulevard arena last month, against Jackie Stewart of Louisville, Ky., in the eight round semi-final at White City.

Interest is being created by the return match between Johnny Phagan and Harry Schuman at the Cicero Stadium next Friday. Schuman was undefeated in six bouts here until he met Johnny at the Cicero arena several weeks ago. Jimmy Eliopoulos, local bantamweight, will be after his third victory over Eddie Evans in a four round contest.

Buck Everett, Gary, Ind., heavyweight, is drilling at Trafton's gymnasium for his 10 round contest against Patsy Perroni of Cleveland at Loyola university gymnasium on March 20. Perroni is due Monday. He knocked out Joe Doktor in his latest bout.

Italian amateur boxers from Cicero will face boys representing the German-American Boxing club at the Lincoln Turner hall, Diversey parkway and Sheffield avenue, tonight. Erich Schlachter, Augie Vollmer, Allen Asp, Anton Koch, and Art Floss will represent the German club. These boys were entered in this year's Golden Gloves tournament and made a good showing.

The boxing committee of the Central A. A. U. yesterday voted to award gold and silver medals to the winners and runners-up in the annual championship bouts at White City on April 5, 6, and 7. Livingston Osborne, head of the judges' division of the Chicago Referees and Judges association, protested the use of referees as judges at the White City bouts. The committee refused to reverse its decision of last Friday when it determined to try out the new system. All eight of the referees who were appointed accepted.

Hawks Ready for Maroons at Montreal

MONTREAL, Que., March 10.—[Special.]—The Chicago Blackhawks arrived here today for their last game of the season against the Maroons tomorrow night. Victory over the Maroons is imperative for the Chicago six if it is to retain the mathematical chance of reaching the Stanley cup playoffs in the American division of the National Hockey league.

The Chicago six was in good condition following its three goal rally against the Ottawa Senators in the third period last night. Only Lolo Couture, who suffered a sprained ankle against Ottawa at Chicago Tuesday night, is ailing and it was expected that he would be available against the Maroons.

The Hawks now trail the New York Rangers by six points in the league standing and have as their only hope of reaching the playoffs victory in their remaining four games while the Rangers are held to two points in six games. Consequently the Hawks, for all practical purposes, are as good as out of the championship series.

Kate Smith to Send Six Day Riders on Way

Kate Smith of radio fame will fire the starting gun in Chicago's 29th international six day bicycle race at the Stadium tomorrow night. Previous to the start of the race there will be a one hour amateur team race with twenty competing.

Work was started on the track yesterday and it will be completed this afternoon so that riders may train.

Alfred Letourner of France, and Gerard Debaets, Belgium, the Red Devil team which won the New York race last week, continue to be the popular favorites at the Stadium, where they are supervising the conditioning of their wheels.

William (Torchy) Peden flew from New York yesterday. Mickey Rodak, his partner, met him at the airport.

TAKE BODY OF CHARLES FOSTER TO WASHINGTON

HAVANA, March 10.—(AP)—The body of Charles C. Foster, 61, veteran newspaperman, who died here yesterday of heart disease, will be sent north tomorrow morning on the Key West boat.

It will be taken to Washington, D. C. Burial, members of the family said, probably will take place in Washington, although that had not been definitely decided.

A native of Lexington, Ind., Foster resided for years at Alexandria, Va., when he was not covering races at various tracks. For the last seven years he was director of publicity for the Cuban-American Jockey club.

6TH CORPS AREA POLO TRIO MEETS BADGERS TONIGHT

St. Agatha and St. Elizabeth heavyweights, semi-finalists in the C. Y. O. Basketball league race, will meet tonight at De La Salle gymnasium to settle third place.

These two teams were eliminated by St. Bernard and St. Joseph. St. Agatha lost to St. Bernard, 25 to 23, after three overtime periods, and St. Elizabeth was defeated by St. Joseph, 20 to 19.

Third and fourth place in the lightweight and girls' divisions will also be at stake at De La Salle tonight as St. Cecelia lights play St. Mary's of the Lake and St. Agnes girls meet St. Mary's Training school.

The C. Y. O. championship finals will be held tomorrow afternoon at the 131st regiment armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue.

ROSENBLOOM IS EASY VICTOR IN HEUSER BOUT

New York, March 10.—[Special.]—Maxie Rosenbloom successfully defended his world's light heavyweight championship tonight by defeating Adolph Heuser of Germany in a 15 round bout at Madison Square Garden.

Fighting before a crowd of 13,000 Rosenbloom easily outboxed Heuser, who, despite his courageous rushes and wild swinging, was seldom able to reach the title holder.

Rosenbloom rarely was in danger after the first few rounds. Heuser extended him in the first two rounds, bouncing several hard right off his jaw.

Sauerkraut Is Properly Kept in Cool Place.

Economical tips for week-end food shoppers—a Saturday morning radio feature—will be presented today by Mary Meade over station W-C-N. Tune in at 9:45 for Miss Meade's market chat.

BY MARY MEADE.

The why, what, where, when, and who queries on cookery troubles are wheedling for first place—or any place at all—in the question clinic, now in session. And remember, if you have any kitchen problems write to us and let us worry about them for you.

First, troubles from Mrs. J. H. L.: "What makes sauerkraut become soft?"

And the answer: It has spoiled, Mrs. L. This was caused by the working of organisms which have been allowed to attack the kraut, either because it contained too little acid to preserve it or because there is not enough juice to cover and keep it from being exposed to the air, which is always full of these undesirable bacteria. It also is possible that you are keeping the kraut at too warm a temperature after the fermentation has been completed. It should be kept in a cool place—not room temperature.

Next from an anonymous reader: "When serving a buffet supper, if you expect to have chicken salad and want to have a lettuce leaf on every plate, how do you do it? Also, if the dessert is an ice box cake or a frozen dessert, is it put on the same plate and taken at the same time you have your salad, etc.? If the salad is served by the hostess, should the dessert be also? If coffee is served, who pours it and where?"

Answer: For such a buffet supper I usually like to do one of two things with the salad. Sometimes, if you have crisp, curly, cup shaped lettuce, you can arrange these cups on a platter and fill each with its individual serving of salad, lifting them to the guests' plates with a wide salad fork or shovel. Or it is sometimes better to border the edge of a platter with lettuce cups and then place the salad in the center. The hostess may lift a leaf to each plate and then drop into it a generous spoonful of salad.

Often the dessert is used as a separate course at such affairs. Have the plates collected after the first course and taken to the kitchen, and then the dessert brought on to be served likewise by the hostess. Coffee may be served by the hostess, by a second person at the table, or simply be poured in the kitchen and served from a tray, with cream and sugar following.

Now for a question on eggs [Mrs. H. M.]: "Can you tell me about the small spots one sometimes sees on eggs? Are they a sign the egg is bad?"

No. Fresh eggs sometimes show these small spots, though not usually in the best grades of candled eggs. They are not harmful, however. You'll find them more often in eggs which have come from commercial flocks which have been generously fed to produce eggs than in eggs from the average barnyard flocks.

Next, a few definitions for Miss E. C., who asks about scallions, escarolle, and rissoles:

Scallion is another name for the vegetable commonly known as the shallot, or leek. It is a member of the onion family and a close cousin to garlic, though milder in flavor. It's used for seasoning and for pickles.

Escarolle is a member of the chicory family—a curly, crisp, green and white salad green.

Rissoles are little meat pastries. Usually they are made from thinly rolled pie paste. This may be cut into rounds, a teaspoon of meat or fish mixture placed on one side of each round, and the other side folded over and pressed down firmly before dipping in egg and crumbs and frying in deep fat. Or the dough may be divided in half and rolled in two large, thin sheets. On the bottom, about two inches apart, small round balls of meat are placed, the top pastry layer arranged over them, and then each rissole cut out with a round cutter, the edges pressed together and fried also in deep fat. The folded surfaces in both cases should be moistened.

Outline Plans for Music at World's Fair

Friends Group to Work with Exposition.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

The Chicago Friends of Music were never more alive than they are today, said Mrs. Arthur Meeker.

The 30,000 members of the organization will be raised to 50,000 as soon as possible and, since every one seems contented that their contributions should be spent in the cause of good music, they will be so spent, leaving the Temple of Music as a project for the future, said Frederick Stock, one of the speakers.

The Century of Progress exposition pledges 100 per cent coöperation with the Friends of Music in any and all musical undertakings, said Dr. Allen D. Albert, another speaker.

These were the high points of a massmeeting of the Friends of Music at Orchestra hall just after the Chicago Symphony orchestra concert yesterday afternoon. Part of the purpose thereof was to make public musical plans for the summer and, while these were not dwelt upon in great detail, enough was revealed to indicate that there will be much music during the course of the exposition.

Dr. Albert explained that one part of the exposition plans had been put aside through lack of funds. This was the engaging of great professional orchestras with outstanding soloists. The exposition's part of the program will therefore confine itself to its two other points, the first, community music by national choruses and choruses identified with the great commercial corporations; the second, music of the coming generation by high school choruses and orchestras. He added that the organization from the national high school camp at Interlochen, Mich., would visit the exposition at about the time that, as has been already announced, it will participate in the Chicagoland Music Festival in August.

The greater part of the professional music to be heard would seem, although not expressly stated, to be scheduled for the Chicago Symphony orchestra, of which Mr. Stock is conductor. Neither was it indicated whether such concerts would take place inside or outside of the exposition grounds. Suitable places already exist inside the grounds, it was said, without the necessity of putting up another building. Mr. Stock and Dr. Albert made a tour of the grounds a few days ago in company with a pair of trumpeters in search of echoes. They found at least six inclosures satisfactory for any and all music.

Whether it be inside or out, the Friends of Music and the Century of Progress will work together for music this summer.

500 Japanese Cherry Trees on Way to City as Centenary Gift

Five hundred Japanese cherry trees, the gift of Japanese residents to the city, in commemoration of its hundredth anniversary, are in transit from Seattle, it was announced yesterday by Y. Muto, Japanese consul general. The trees are to be planted on Wooded Island in Jackson park as soon as the frost leaves the ground. They are expected to arrive in one week.

Included in the shipment are five large trees that are expected to bear the white blossom that is the national flower of Japan this May. The remaining trees are young, between four and five feet in height, and will not bloom for three or four years. The trees were grown in a suburb of Seattle from slips of trees imported from Japan.

Here's a Diet That Removes Excess Pounds

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Want to take off a few pounds without much dietary discomfort?

O. K. Then, let your breakfast run pretty much to the standardized form of unsweetened coffee with hot milk, a thin slice of toast, sparingly buttered, and some fruit or fruit juice—grapefruit, orange, or some prunes or apple sauce.

Let your luncheon be different. Different from what you've been eating all winter. Luncheons, I note, during the cold months frequently turn into small dinners. There'll be a soup, meat, a vegetable, potatoes, and dessert.

Now suppose you make up your mind that luncheon time is to be your real reducing meal. Don't starve! But change your style of ordering. Then, every day you can possibly take it, eat a bowl of salad of some kind, preferably vegetable salad. Anyway, vegetable salad three days a week. Have a big bowl of it and get in as many of the spring vegetables as you can find. Eat with it a roll or a bran biscuit and a glass of milk, or cup of tea, if you can't stand milk.

Then for your dinner keep to lamb chops, liver and bacon, roast beef or baked halibut or a small steak. Now, you may do one of two things—either take two green vegetables or another big bowl of salad. The dessert may be a custard, an ice, or stewed fruit. Coffee with a little cream and sugar is allowed, but if you feel you don't need the cream and sugar get along without it.

In seven days of the above diet, providing between meals you drink at least six glasses of water to help along the "spring house cleaning" the fruit and vegetables are giving, you should lose a few pounds. More important at this season of the year, you are giving your inner self a cleansing that will put a new spring vigor into your veins.

The noonday green vegetable salad can be ordered in any restaurant. Or it can be prepared easily at home. As a reducer it has our hearty indorsement, and as a necessary cleanser even more so.

Dr. W. A. Robson, London, to Give U. of C. Course

Dr. William A. Robson of the London School of Economics, an authority on public administration in Great Britain, will lecture during the spring quarter in April at the University of Chicago. The title of Dr. Robson's course is to be "Contemporary Aspects of British Public Administration." Dr. Robson, whose wife is a cellist known on the concert stage as Juliette Alvin, visited the university for several weeks last spring.

New Blouses Fit Perfectly at Waistline

That's Why They Win So Many Shoppers.

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Most of the uproar about blouses is being made by the well pleased shoppers who finally have located blouses that are designed to fit rather than the shapeless, quaint old numbers that had to be reefed in to fit a modern silhouette . . . this year the new arrivals are positive miracles of mass tucking at strategic points. They fit smoothly and dashingly around the waistline, discreetly around the ribs, and for once in a lifetime you will find sleeves that are made not to fit a plump eater but carefully and thoughtfully cut to fit slim young arms, without extra fullness.

Charming taffeta blouses that are going to be perfect with certain types of street and dress parade suits are here! Clever things with a well tucked lower section that can be worn tuck-over or tuck-in with the skirt. Short, good looking sleeves that have delightfully matched themselves to the sophisticated neckline in style are unusually effective for just that reason. A high neckline is achieved with a very flattering bow with fringed ends, or you can wear these fringed collar ends as a long tie.

This, inquiring shoppers, sums up the charms of the new Lynn Fontanne blouse, a copy of what that extremely decorative star wears in her successful new play, "Design for Living." You may buy it in black, red, and white, and it also loudly screams for attention in models of gay plaided fine soft cottons or ginghams.

Other ruffled charmers in the blouse collections are the pin dotted sheer cottons made with a surplice closing. Navy, red, and beige backgrounds are spattered with white or colored dots . . . a very full ruffle outlines the collar line and skitters down the front; perhaps nothing unusual to that simple way of being ruffled, but the spanking white edge is what makes the contrast that cheers. The same white edged ruffle streaks around the cuff of the short sleeve.

If you want some swanky new waistcoats of flannel or cotton, seek the expertly tailored models that look like a portion of a sporting gentleman's slightly dizzy checked fancy vest. These flippant looking affairs are made of black, blue, red, and white checked smooth flannel . . . fashioned with well concealed pockets, a double-breasted closing with a double row of pearl buttons to hold it across your chest and waistline.

Perky white cottons featuring waffle-ish patterns, ribs and flat wales like pique are the next favorites, and some crinkled wonders in crisp white crinkled, blistered, and novelty wrinkled sheer materials offer other vast models to wear with your newest spring suit.

And while you are shopping for unusual scarf effects, especially wild stripes, plaids, huge dots, and fantastic modern designs and color combinations, do not neglect the new ribbons . . . stunning new ideas that can be bought by the yard, fringed by your own nimble fingers, swung around your neckline, knotted carelessly, and you will have a new scarf . . . the new ribbons come in all widths from six to fourteen inches wide.

Giddy, rakish plaids, bold, breezy stripes, and some of the best looking checks, dots, and geometric designs you have seen in weeks are now ready for your inspection.

Three Women Open Individual Art Displays

Hermine Stellar Presents Landscapes, Figures.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Three individual shows by women painters have opened this week. Landscapes and figure studies by Hermine Stellar are on view at the Chicago Woman's Aid, 185 North Wabash avenue. Miss Stellar's finest canvas is the portrait of her mother. The landscapes are rather sketchy, but attractive because of their loose handling and bright colors. A wading in the shallow waters of modernism is the most apt interpretation of her technic, but there is no bold plunging into the depths.

An entirely different kind of painting is found in the exhibit of portraits by Susan Ricker Knox in the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue. Miss Knox is a brilliant painter in the strong, conservative tradition. She has become internationally known for her penetrating portraits of Ellis island immigrant figures. In the current exhibit she depicts the American Indian of the Hopi, Pima, Maricopa, and Yaqui [Mexican] tribes as found in Arizona.

Perhaps the most distinguished portrait is that of an Indian chief in his war bonnet. Other paintings of squaws and their children have a human interest that makes them appealing. The "Pima Basket Makers," a mother and two little girls being instructed in the craft, is delightful.

Among the portraits of white persons, of which there are a few, the most intriguing is that of "Jasmine," an adorable cherub of three with blue eyes, dressed in blue, sitting on a porch step on a summer day.

The third exhibit is of flowers and landscapes by Marie Blanke in the Cordon club. Miss Blanke gives us an entire room filled with lovely flower sketches. The second room is hung with landscapes, a still life, and one or two portrait studies.

Several of the landscapes are interesting in color and composition. The flowers, however, remain the most pertinent feature of the show.

Good Morning!

Some excellent acting, a good deal of suspense, and romance of the brand that made "The Sheik" and "The Great Divide" best sellers are this picture's assets. They keep alive your interest despite occasional directorial ineptness that causes bewilderment.

A gentleman crook and a lady detective are the film's pièces de résistance. They meet socially at Mrs. Lathem's sumptuous home, where both are week-end house guests.

The disappearance of the hostess' diamond necklace precipitates action and affaires de cœur—and from then on the suave Andrew Burke and the lovely Claire Roberts fight and love with all their might and main.

Both are clever, as each is to discover. But, even in fondest moments, neither is entirely trusting nor entirely frank—and so come about the cinema's most stirring moments.

For instance, you are to see a charming damsel shanghaied when she is clucking happily to herself over what she believes is a coup, brilliantly maneuvered by herself. You are to see her with irons on her slender ankles, beating frantically against the steely mastery of the man she loves but seeks to trap.

You are to witness her escape—and his pursuit—and land with the two of them back in Mrs. Lathem's drawing room. There a séance such as has contributed to their mutual adventurings again furthers the intentions of Andrew Burke and brings long delayed smiles to the lips of the fair Miss Roberts.

Handsome and adept Warner Baxter and exquisite Miriam Jordan—who displays brains as well as pulchritude—make an engaging team. Herbert Mundin contributes some enjoyable comedy and Florence Roberts does a believable bit as a lovable, gullible, too brandy loving Mrs. Lathem. Minor rôles are well managed.

The story is played against a background of lavishness and beauty, and Miss Jordan wears some striking clothes.

All in all, I think you'll find "Dangerously Yours" quite a bit of fun.

Society Will Enjoy a Very Busy Week-End

Parties for Brides-to-Be on Program.

BY JUDITH CASS.

EVERY ONE who is "in" society has plenty of notations on his or her social calendar for this week-end, for there are any number of interesting things going on, including two parties tonight for brides of the near future, Paderewski's concert tomorrow, a tea this afternoon at Robert H. McCormick's for the juniors of the Alliance Française, a buffet supper and musical at the Arts club tomorrow night and numerous other small affairs.

The Gordon P. Kelleys just returned yesterday from a jaunt to Nassau which was extended a week longer than they had planned and so necessitated a week's postponement of the dinner dance they and A. Watson Armour III. are giving for Miss Constance Hasler and Jack Simpson.

When we talked to Mr. Kelley yesterday afternoon he said he and his wife had just been in the house ten minutes and were then in the midst of opening the acceptances and regrets, so they had no idea how many would be at the Saddle and Cycle tonight but they thought between seventy-five and a hundred, including the junior W. Irving Osbornes [Elsa Armour], the Russell and the Phelps Kelleys, the young Ezra Warners, the young Frederic McLaughlins, the Herbert McLaughlins, the Dexter Cummingses, the Otis Hubbards, the "Jimmy" Addingtons, the Henry Rowleys, Miss Geraldine Swift, Miss Dorothy Ranney, Miss Barbara Wendell, Lawrence Callahan, and Dustin Grannis. The Hasler-Simpson wedding will take place next Saturday in Lake Forest, where they will be at home after May 1, although they have not found a house yet.

Dinner Party for Paderewski.

Titus Zbyszewski, the Polish consul general, will have Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey and Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Burnham as guests at luncheon tomorrow at his residence, 999 Lake Shore drive, before the Paderewski concert at the Auditorium. After the concert, if he is not too tired, the noted Polish pianist will return home with the consul and his guests for a cup of tea, after which they will drive north to Evanston for the late dinner the Burnhams are giving for Paderewski at their residence on Sheridan road and Burnham place.

As he always does, Paderewski is traveling in a private car and he will live in the car during the two and a half days he will be in Chicago. The Burnhams' dinner is the only social engagement he has made for this visit, as he feels that he must conserve his strength.

The Burnhams must know exactly what the great artist enjoys and they must always provide it, for he never misses a chance to enjoy their hospitality. Mrs. Burnham says he is the easiest person in the world to entertain, for he is so unpretentious and appreciative of everything. Bridge is his favorite recreation, so card tables will be set up after dinner tomorrow night and at least one table will play until dawn, for Paderewski always wants to play that long. He also likes tricks of magic, so Mrs. Burnham has arranged to have a magician come in after dinner to entertain the party of fourteen for half an hour before the bridge games start.

FOLLY ISLAND

By Wallace Irwin

SYNOPSIS.

Bart Burgess, while marooned in a catboat on Peconic bay, fifty miles from his Long Island home in Wyattville, meets a girl in a canoe who lives on a nearby island. Bart learns that she is one of the Bayleys, who have lived in seclusion on the island fifteen years. The father travels. Less than a week later Trevor Burgess, Bart's father, dies suddenly from a heart attack. He confesses in a letter left for Bart to being a bigamist. The Bayleys of Folly island are his second family. They know him as Matthew Bayley. He asks Bart, for his invalid mother's sake, to guard the secret, and leaves a fortune to provide for the Bayleys. Bart calls on Mrs. Bayley, posing as a lawyer, and finds her a lovely woman. She tells him, in confidence, that Alice isn't Matthew Bayley's daughter. When Bart realizes he loves Alice he resolves to stay away from Folly island. He becomes engaged to Lora Sackett, a distant relative and recent divorcee. The Bayleys visit New York and Bart sees them. Ingalls Frederick Warren, spoiled child of a new made fortune, known as "Nosey Ingy," has invited Alice to Wyattville. Bart tells Alice of his engagement. Alice and her mother are guests of the Warrens for the annual Wyattville flower show. Mrs. Burgess has the Bayleys in for tea. Alice sees a photograph of Trevor Burgess. Bart suspects his Aunt Augusta and Ingy Warren of stumbling on his father's secret and inviting the Bayleys to Wyattville to expose it. Mrs. Constance Farnham is included in the intrigue. Bart calls on her. He learns that Mrs. Bayley was married to her son, who was killed shortly after in an accident, and that Alice is his daughter. Alice and her mother leave Wyattville and Bart is unable to learn their whereabouts. Lora realizes Bart loves Alice. She visits a friend in New York. When Ingy brings the Bayleys into town Lora loans them her friend's apartment.

INSTALLMENT XLVIII.

A MAGNANIMOUS GESTURE.

Alice put her hands on Lora's shoulders, and looking earnestly in her face, implored, "Don't stop telling me. Tell me the rest of it. Was that my mother that came to the island?"

"Yes, honey." Then, as though the girl's silence was urging her to go on. "You were about two years old then—when Bayley married your mother. That fisherman was a witness when they were married. He took Ingy and showed him—"

"He wasn't my father." Alice seemed to be talking to herself. "Somebody named Farnham—somebody else." She stared at the wall, getting used to it. Then, "And Bart—Bart isn't—" She laid her hand across her mouth. "Why are you telling me this, now?" she asked wildly.

"My dear little girl—" Lora had backed away, and her voice was growing shrill. "I want you and Bart to go on, that's why. Don't think I've been dumb and blind all this time. I want you to go on, I say. Something about the Farnhams has kicked up all this dust between you and him. Go back and get him, unless you're a fool. Do you think that every girl can have a man like Bart Burgess?"

"I hope you'll both be happy," he said with a wild laugh. "Im glad you're being big about it."

Then Lora laughed. It was such a high, dry sound that Alice was startled out of her own preoccupation. The other girl stood there, frivolously moded, striking a light to another cigaret. Not a thought in her silly head, you would have decided, seeing her there, tilted on her high heels.

"But, Bart—"

"Take him away, darling. You've thrown a pair of sixes. As far as I'm concerned, I'm through."

Lora rushed into the hall, fearfully afraid that she was going to spoil it all by crying again. You have to love a man an awful lot, she was thinking, to hand him over to another girl . . . just to make him happy. I'll get a lot of credit for this, won't I? Hell, who wants credit? Besides, Ingy's rich . . .

She reached for Elsie's telephone and called up her mother's number.

Bart Burgess, standing under the stairs in Mrs. Lind's little hallway, heard her voice tinkling over the wire.

"Congratulate me, old thing."

"O, very well. I congratulate you. But what on?"

And wnat was Lora's practical joke this morning?

"On matrimony, darling, if you think it's worth your while." Then, employing her art of telling a story wrong way to, "Tammany Hall refused us a license in a hurry, so we took a plane to Baltimore where they have a sense of humor. So now I'm trying out my new name. Mrs. Frederick Ingalls Warren."

"Hey, Lora, is this a joke?"

"Not yet, it isn't." Then, as though the fourth dimension could be explained in a paragraph. "You know Ingy's always been goofy about me. Well, day before yesterday I decided that he was a dear. And you know my power of persuasion. He was putty in my hands. Hence the license."

Because he made no answer, she asked, "Are you listenin'?"

"But why—all of a sudden, like that—"

"Bart, dear, you know as well as I do. Ingy's my speed, and you're not." The telephone began to splutter, and indistinctly he heard her say, ". . . and maybe you'll be interested to know that your girl will be back on her island this afternoon . . ."

"But, Lora . . ."

"Don't be stupid. Didn't you hear what I said? I've married Ingy, and you ought to be damned glad of it. With your girl waiting for you, out there in the middle of the ocean, what are you grousing about now?"

"I'm not grousing. Only—"

The rest was a broken, jangled echo . . . "And, Bart, you won't feel about me . . . feel about me . . ." Queer noise over the wire. Was she laughing or crying? He never knew, for she hung up on him.

The drawing room, as he passed vaguely through it, was like a littered madhouse, with Mrs. Lind still on a box, her face in her hands. He stopped foolishly to console her, to pat her shaking shoulders, and mumble something about how it was all right. Ingy was a good boy, and he'd make her comfortable, and all that.

In a dream he left the house, ceasing to worry about Mrs. Lind. She'd get over her hysterics after a while and consider the brighter side. The Warren money, after all, was a lot better trade than a social position, especially in times like these. Had Lora considered that, standing in the midst of her wedding presents and making another of her quick, funny decisions?

But was she laughing when she hung up the receiver? He wondered for a while, then forgot everything else in the flood of happiness that came over him.

At noon, as he started to motor northward toward Port England, he saw Ingy's car just turning in at the Warren gate. Both drivers slowed up, fender to fender, and sat grinning at one another, more friendly than they had ever been before in all their lives.

"Well," drawled Bart, "you killed Cæsar, didn't you, old member!"

"O. Then she told you?" Ingy was bright as a child, his super-sophistication gone.

"Yep. Congratulations."

"Thanks, awfully," with a flourish of young vanity, he said. "I didn't want to poach on your preserves, understand, but you know how such things happen. Lora's been a bit goofy about me for a long time—O, years before you came into the picture. So I found a speakeasy where you can get Mumm's 1911. Very nice, if it hasn't gone flat. Lora and I began pitying each other. You know, we agreed that you were a swell guy, but a bit heavy. The next we knew we were both crying over our wine. That's how it happened."

So this was the man whom Bart had been stalking romantically with a pearl handled revolver.

"I hope you'll both be happy," he said with a wild laugh.

"I'm glad you're being big about it."

"I'm being enormous about it. And listen, Ingy. Remember what I promised you that morning, out on Little Peconic Bay?"

"In that stinking little catboat, you mean?"

"Yeah. Remember?"

"You didn't promise me any wedding present."

"No. I promised you a bust in the jaw. Well, I'm willing to trade that in for a solid silver bath tub, or anything the bride fancies. Only——"

"Well, come across. Come across."

"Only I'm holding that bust in reserve. For you, sweetheart. I mean, unless you pump up all the sunshine you've got, and give it to Lora. And keep on pumping."

"O, listen." Ingy stepped on his starter as if to fly from immediate peril. "Not jealous, old bean?"

"O, I'm above that sort of small town stuff."

"Well, these sudden things are bound to be annoying. Mrs. Lind's been to all sorts of pains about the wedding. And I hate to make trouble."

This from Ingy! Miracles are happening all around us, thought Bart as he drove away, increasing his speed northward.

When Planning forSecondBaby Consider First

Arrange for Loving Care While You're Gone.

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

Are you planning for second baby? Going again through all the pleasure of collecting his or her layette, wondering how many of the first baby's clothes you can use, laughing at the mistakes you made with his slips and smocked batiste dresses, which proved to be only big enough for a doll? Have you talked things over with your doctor, decided on your hospital, balanced—or unbalanced!—your check book, or dug into the toe of the old stocking to cover the cost of the newcomer?

In among all the plans you make for the new baby there's one you should try to make for the first one, who may be scarcely more than a baby herself. That plan concerns the time when you are away at the hospital and often for same time after you come back, before you are able to take the helm again.

Who is going to take care of your elder little son or daughter during that period of time? If it's the wrong person it is hard on the child and may undo much of your own good management. You may find yourself greeted with behavior troubles on your return, when you have a new baby on your hands and feel least fitted to cope with them.

A surprising number of mothers have found difficulties when they came home from the hospital which were due to what had happened in their absence—over indulgence, or too great strictness, or some way of handling radically different from their own.

Of course, if you have members of the family who understand your first child and can step in and run your house, or carry her off to a happy visit with them, it's quite simple. Otherwise, try as tactfully as you can to have the relative or friend who is best for that small son or daughter take charge of her while you're away. Or, if it is necessary for you to have paid assistance, let it be a person, if possible, who is familiar to the child and fond of him, and one you really know about.

Even so, when you return with the latest little "excitement" in your arms, be prepared to be lenient and understanding of any slips in habits or behavior. This isn't an easy experience for the first born, you know.

Society Will Enjoy a Very Busy Week-End

ways called "Sailor," are not included in the party, but they will find an opportunity to greet Paderewski without a doubt, for all three of the young Burnhams are extravagant admirers of the great Pole. Mardi, particularly, is heartbroken to miss his visit, but she is at the Mount Vernon seminary in Washington.

Buffet Supper for Florence Carr.

There will be about thirty guests at the buffet supper for Miss Florence Carr and Edgar L. Marston at which Miss Eleanor McNally will be the hostess at the Judson avenue residence in Evanston of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McNally, tonight. It is to be a most informal party, Mrs. McNally said yesterday, with nothing special planned for after supper although there will be card tables set up and the radio turned on for dancing.

In addition to the members of the large bridal party there will be Miss Barbara Graf, Miss Janet Ayer, Miss Jane Fortune, Cyrus H. Adams III., Torrey and Frazier Wilkins, Jack Fortune, Charles Connell, Talcott Griswold, and a few others at the party.

The Carr-Marston wedding is planned for two weeks from today and will take place at St. Chrysostom's. They, too, are looking for a house in Lake Forest in which to be at home to their friends after May 1.

R. H. McCormick Will Give Tea.

The Juniors of the Alliance Française, the board of directors of the senior organization, and a few of the senior members will have tea this afternoon with Robert Hall McCormick at his apartment in the McCormick building following M. Pierre de Lanux's lecture at the Alliance. M. de Lanux, who is connected with the league of nations, will talk at 3 o'clock in room 825 of the Fine Arts building on "The High Ebb and Low Ebb of International Ethics." Dean Gilkey of the University of Chicago is entertaining at supper for the Frenchman tomorrow night.

Next Monday afternoon M. de Lanux will talk to members of the Contemporary club at their regular meeting at the Fortnightly and that night he is to speak at 8 o'clock at the Winnetka Community house on "France and the World Situation." Mrs. William Gold Hibbard is acting as chairman of the affair and ushering will be the Misses Louise Lackner, Antoinette Lackner, Helen Bell, Margaret Hamill, and Virginia Hobart. M. de Lanux will not be in Chicago on Tuesday and Wednesday, but on Thursday he will return to speak at the Evanston Forum in the evening. Friday he will be in Milwaukee, and on Saturday he will be the guest of the Council on Foreign Relations at a luncheon meeting. When he leaves here then he will go as far west as Albuquerque and back to New York by way of New Orleans to sail on April 22 for France.

Today at noon in the Alliance's quarters in the Fine Arts building, room 1200, M. Jean-Paul Freyss will deliver a lecture.

Mrs. MacLeish to Arrive Today.

Mrs. Archibald MacLeish arrives today from New York to spend several days with her husband's mother, Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, in Glencoe, and to sing tomorrow night at a musical and buffet supper at the Arts club. Mr. MacLeish, who is to lecture at the University of Chicago Tuesday night, will not arrive from the east until that day, so he will not be in the audience to hear his wife's lovely soprano voice tomorrow night.

Jacques Gordon, violinist, who used to live in Chicago and who is immensely popular here, will be the other artist on the program. The C. Barney Hoodspeeds, the Eames MacVeaghs, the Andrew Sherriffs, Mrs. Americus C. Callahan, Miss Emily Larned, the Harold C. Bodmans, Mr. and Mrs. Hal C. Bangs and Heman H. Field will be among those entertaining guests at the affair.

Addison Stillwell, who lives at the Racquet club but spends many weekends at the Chicago Golf in Wheaton, is out there this week-end and is to be host at a dinner tonight to about twenty of the smart Wheaton colony at the club.

Although Edward F. Swift Jr. had hoped to keep the plans for his second marriage secret, just because it is a second marriage for him and also for his bride-to-be, until after the marriage, the news leaked out, so he is admitting that he and Mrs. Kathryn Thompson Mather of Pasadena are to be wed early in June. He is just back from a visit to his fiancée, but he will be returning west the last of May to claim his bride and bring her back to Chicago to live.

Mrs. Mather lived in Evanston when she was a little child, but her home has been in Pasadena, where her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Thompson, live, for some years. She has two young sons.

Mr. Swift's mother, Mrs. Edward F. Swift, has just come home from a winter sojourn in Phoenix, and she does not plan to go to Pasadena for the wedding, for it will be very small, probably with no one but the bride and bridegroom and minister and the necessary witnesses present.

Bright Red in Luncheon Crowd.

A bright red dress, an equally bright red blouse and a sassy looking little gay red hat added dash and color to the smart luncheon crowd at the Woman's Exchange yesterday, the dress worn by Mrs. Thomas C. Dennehy Jr., the hat by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Ralph N. Isham [Eleanor Dennehy], and the blouse by Mrs. Bryan Reid, who was with Mrs. Howard W. Fenton and Mrs. William L. Hodgkins.

Mrs. Isham was lunching with one of her sisters, Mrs. Charles F. Clarke, and at the next table were four of the season's debutantes, the Misses Lydia Swift, Nancy Traylor, Betty Crawley, and Helen Marie Castle, looking tired and a bit disheveled after a busy morning selling hats at the White Elephant Rummage shop. They still had on the smocks the workers at the shop wear, for they were going back after luncheon to stay until the sale was over.

Contrary to expectation, there were shoppers galore out, and one of the girls said all the buyers had cash and most of them presented ten dollar bills in payment for the hats which cost much less than that amount—the prices ranged from ten cents to several dollars—so perhaps those who claim that money is being hoarded are right!

Miss Eleanor Litsinger, who also helped at the rummage shop, had to work at the Exchange, too, for it was her day to stand behind the counter and serve the buffet luncheon. Mrs. John W. Gary and Mrs. William H. Hubbard were among others lunching at the Exchange.

Dinner Tomorrow for Baron Sardi.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. Edward A. Leight—an entertaining and accomplished linguist—is having a group of friends in for tea to meet the young Italian nobleman, Baron Alessandro Sardi di Revisondoli, one of the two royal Italian commissioners to A Century of Progress and the former assistant secretary of public works of Italy.

A few weeks back Mrs. Leight entertained for Prince Potenziani, who preceded Baron Sardi to Chicago and laid the groundwork for the Italian pavilion at the World's Fair. The baron is particularly interested in working out the details of an exhibition presenting the Fascist reclamation program and the new system of training and educating young Italians.

Baron Sardi is also to be entertained the evening of March 22 at a dinner given by the Dante Alighieri society at the Belden-Stratford hotel. The Italian consul general, Giuseppe Castruccio, is the honorary president of the society, and Dr. Italo F. Volini the acting president. And among those actively interested are: Col. Tryggve Siqueland, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Admiral Wat T. Cluverius, Rear Admiral Walter Crosley, Miss Cornelia Fairbanks, Mrs. Wentworth Field, and Maj. Gen. Frank Parker.

The Count and Countess Visconti are leaving tomorrow for Washington and will sail on the 18th on the Conte di Savoia for Italy. The countess' parents, the Warren C. Fairbankses may go to Indianapolis to spend the spring in their house there.

Mrs. Frank R. Meadowcroft returned yesterday to her apartment at the Webster hotel after two months in Atlantic City. She will be here until Easter and then will be off to Wiscasset, Me., for the summer.

The junior Henry H. Porters have found a furnished apartment at 23 East Division street which suits them and they are moving into it from the Ambassador East next week. In the fall they will take an unfurnished apartment and start housekeeping with their own furniture.

George Lytton to Go South Today.

George Lytton is leaving today for his southern residence at Gulf Hills, Ocean Springs, Miss., for a two weeks' vacation. All members of the University Club Banjo club, of which Mr. Lytton is a member, have been invited to spend a spring vacation at Mr. Lytton's residence, Quinta Las Paz, and several of them will leave for there on April 8.

A group of young women will meet at Vassar House restaurant this noon to talk about plans for a cooperative college exhibit at A Century of Progress. The meeting has been called by the Woman's College Board for A Century of Progress. There will be graduates of Vassar, Wellesley, Mount Holyoke, Bryn Mawr, Wells, Mills, Sweet Briar, and Elmira in attendance.

The result of some of the hours of work several Winnetka residents put in every Monday morning at the art studio in the Winnetka Community house will be shown tomorrow afternoon when Mrs. John Vennema and Mrs. Edward A. Brion have an exhibit of their paintings at the studio. Tea is to be served by members of the North Shore Art League and several of Chicago's consuls are to be introduced as special guests.

Vera Borea Completes Yellow Gown with Black Chenille Jacket and Muff

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—From the first spring fashion viewpoint it looks as if muffs, made of everything but fur, will be fashionable all summer. Vera Borea's chenille muff, which goes with the strikingly unusual jacket shown in our sketch today, is one that Paris has fallen for in a big way.

The jacket is made of heavy black chenille, and is a hip length fitted type with a big shawl collar, which suggests something for wear on cold evenings, but when it comes to sleeves—there aren't any. Chenille bands are twisted and twined around the bare arms, and that's all. Added to this unreasonable garment is a round muff of black chenille, and the whole makes a daring new evening ensemble which is worn over a frock of lily yellow satin.

The frock, shown in the background, has a skirt that is flared in the center front by a full set-in godet, and around the hipline of this skirt is a slightly flared peplum. The bodice is simple with a wide zigzag bias band edging the décolleté and shoulder straps of twisted satin.

The belt is also a twisted satin roll with two rabbit ear ends sewed on to the bodice in front, and in back it ends in a big fluffy bow.

The back of this dress is cut to the waistline in a deep V that meets the bow of the sash.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., March 10. —[Special.] — Mrs. Roosevelt was the guest of honor this afternoon at the tea given by the Congressional club for the wives of new members of the 73d congress. Mrs. Charls C. Dill, wife of the senator from Washington, president of the club, presided for the first time since her election.

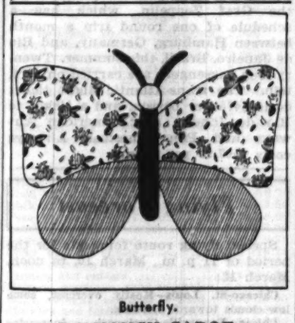
Mrs. Roosevelt was accompanied by her secretary, Mrs. Malvina Thompson Scheider. She wore the costume she wore for the inaugural ceremony at the capitol. After Mrs. Roosevelt was received by Mrs. Dill, the first lady made the tour of the receiving line which was composed of the wives of about fifty new members of congress.

Mrs. George H. Dern, wife of the new secretary of war, and her daughter, Mrs. John Baxter, also were in the company. This is the first time in the history of the Congressional club that a first lady had honored them with her presence except at the annual reception they give in honor of the President and first lady. Mrs. Roosevelt, knowing of the nature of the reception this afternoon, had expressed the desire to meet the wives of these congressmen.

On her return to the White House, the first lady was hostess at a late tea to a small company, including her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parish of New York, in whose home the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were married, and Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Whitehouse, also of New York, the former formerly attached to the American embassy in Paris.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth occupied a box at the junior horse show today at the Riding and Hunt club and had a small company with her to see her young daughter, Paulina, ride her pet pony Dumpling. Anne and Curtis George, grandchildren of former Vice President Curtis, also were among the young riders.

Butterflies Flit Brightly Across Colorful Quilt



Butterfly.

BY NANCY CABOT.

Though there are as many "butterfly" patterns as there are members of the species, with the opportunity they all afford for variety of color and originality in piecing the blocks, each different pattern or each quilt of the same pattern, for that matter, can show marked individuality.

Here, in this appliqued design, each frivolous butterfly is made of a different combination of prints and plain fabrics. Though they are resting momentarily on a plain light background, they seem ready for flight. Join the blocks with strips of print or color and surround them with a dainty border of harmonizing prints.

For a pattern of this quilt design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service Office, 1 South Dearborn street.

Happy In-Laws Asked to Give Their Recipe

Friendly Advice Will Be Passed on to Others.

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Yesterday, while on the subject of in-law doubling up to meet the current economic emergencies, we asked for first hand experiences from those who've met the problem fairly and found that two families can live together without perpetual warfare.

We solicit the aid because it is one of the most serious and difficult problems created by the times. Young couples who never dreamed they'd be back on the old folks' hands again face daily a new mental adjustment toward an old problem. We'd appreciate from you who've managed to meet the emergency with a reasonable degree of amicability a tip on how you do it.

With so much necessary doubling up you can see how this problem grows. Young folk moving in on the older ones and vice versa. We grant that there is no more difficult situation on earth. No advice is so good as that each family live under its own roof. But the times call for compromise with a good many of the old established rules.

This one of the invasion of or invasion on the in-laws is outstandingly in need of modern adaptation. Please tell us how you've met it, you who've found that two families can get on when they have to and have the sense to recognize the meaning of that word compromise.

Again today come several appeals in the name of unhappy in-laws. The girl, in one case, takes her unemployed husband back home. Mother stupidly greets the situation with pressure on the girl to separate from him. Another case, that of a working wife, relates that the husband's mother [in whose home they're now living] resents the moving of a chair, cooking interference, everything. A third case on today's books involves an aged invalid parent's presence in the younger woman's home. There are funds here, but no heart for the mother of an only son.

However, it's more of the currently enforced in-law situation we'd seek advisory aid on. For no one is better able to recommend a cure than those who have taken it successfully.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

[Copyright: 1933 By The Chicago Tribune.]

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

CLASS DAY.

"Gentlemen," said Prof. Fordney to his class, "this is Capt. David Silverman, an intelligence officer during the world war. I've asked him to relate to you some of his interesting experiences."

"How do you do, fellows. I know the professor has been teaching you chaps the value of observation in crime detection. Perhaps this incident will illustrate just how important observation is in any sort of intelligence work.

"One morning while sitting in my headquarters in France near an airdrome an aid rushed in with a dispatch that two airplanes had just left the field. The first one that took off carried a spy conveying valuable information to the enemy!

"I hurriedly determined to down both planes, if necessary, to get the fellow, as I suspicioned the nature of the information the spy possessed.

"Grabbing a pair of field glasses, I saw two planes overhead, exactly alike. While at about the same altitude, several hundred yards separated them.

"I issued orders to a nearby anti-aircraft battery to train its guns on the plane which I knew carried the spy! Seeing the game was up, he signaled his intention of landing, so I called the battery off.

"As the professor would say, 'Quickly, now!' How did I know which plane carried the spy?

"A neat problem in deduction, boys. I can modestly say that the quickness of my observation probably saved thousands of lives."

HOW DID CAPT. SILVERMAN KNOW WHICH PLANE CARRIED THE SPY?

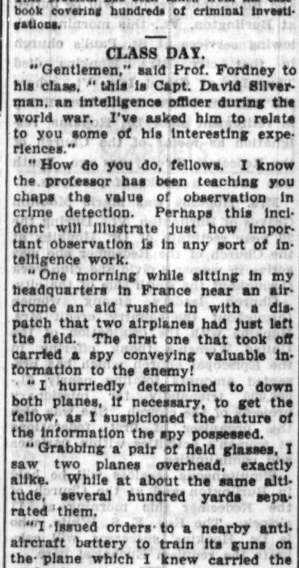
The above problem was sent to the professor by David Silverman, Chicago, for class day. Perhaps you have one you would like the professor to give his students. If so, send it to him in care of this paper.



BOOKS

Novels Show Old and New in Technique

"Union Square," "Hardy Perennial" Titles.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Union Square," by Albert Halper. [Viking.] March choice of the Literary Guild.

"Hardy Perennial," by Helen Hull. [Coward-McCann.]

TWO novels more unlike than "Union Square" and "Hardy Perennial" would be hard to find, but their very unlikeness makes them critically interesting in juxtaposition. The one is unconventional both in technique and in the author's attitude toward his subject, and the other wholly conventional technically and in its exposition. They are both, of their different types, excellent novels, at almost exactly opposite points of the creative literary compass.

Some years ago John Dos Passos wrote the first impressionistic novel about New York, "Manhattan Transfer." That novel gave to American literature a new tempo and a new technique. It caught in words the actual lifebeat of the heart of a metropolis. Its tempo was the pant of excitement, of overstimulation. Technically, it was the method of the motion picture, run through the projector slowly enough so that each separate photograph should be distinct, but rapidly enough so that the whole impression of the film was one of continuous motion and, when "the end" was written, of an interpretive panorama.

Albert Halper, in his first novel, uses exactly the method of John Dos Passos for his picture of "Union Square," New York. The tempo of "Union Square" is staccato.

Since "Manhattan Transfer," the world has known Vicki Baum's "Grand Hotel," with its emotional ratchet wheel whirring through the whole gamut of sensation. On a literary pedigree (to switch the metaphor), "Union Square" would read "By Grand Hotel Out of Manhattan Transfer." Its protagonists resemble those of "Grand Hotel" on a different social level. They are a broken down expoet-ex-communist who drinks his quart of gin a day and keeps himself in coffee and doughnuts and a filthy tenement by writing sex stories; an ardent young artist-communist who is his friend and who falls ideally in love with a great blonde who lives with a Mexican in the same tenement; a dock walloper and his family, also of the tenement; a solid middle aged man who lives with his mistress in the apartment building next door; an Italian barber in the same building who has a reputation among his set as a Lothario, although he lives, through the necessity of disease, a monk's life; a fake Russian couple an artist and his wife a copy writer for department store advertising, and countless less major characters. The life of "Union Square" flows through them.

While "Manhattan Transfer" gave the reader a passionate sense of the individual importance and the collective unimportance and casualness of the lives which brush one another in a vast metropolis, "Union Square" gives rather a sense of individual unimportance as opposed to the collective importance of life in a great city. And that is, I believe, the difference between an actual interpretation of the city and mere impressionism. The one is creative art. The other, skillful photography.

"Hardy Perennial," at the other swing of the pendulum, is no panoramic record; it is in no sense pictorial; it is—if you wish to call it so—sentimental in contrast to the wholly unsentimental "Union Square." It is a good old fashioned novel, told in the good old fashioned manner, about predominantly good, if not old fashioned, people. It is preëminently the story of a person, not of an idea. That person is the middle aged wife of a man whose belief in himself must always be blown up, like one of those balloons from which the air seeps almost imperceptibly until it suddenly goes flat. She is a fine human being in the sense that she does her job in life without grousing, and although she sees through her husband [and her children] never gives them away to themselves.

"Hardy Perennial" is the picture of so many wives in their relationship to their successful and attractive husbands and their grown, or almost grown children, that it has something of the quality of an American epic, just as, at the other end of the literary prism, "Union Square" glows with something of the epic rainbow. Neither novel is superb. Both are memorable.

Both Miss Hull and Albert Halper are midwestern in their beginnings, and both former Chicagoans. Mr. Halper was born here [in 1904] and lived here much of his life. Miss Hull, born in Albion Mich., was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1912 and went back there for graduate work in English, which she has taught successfully at Wellesley, Barnard, and Columbia.

Susan Prior Writes Study of Woman and Unrequited Love

Susan Prior has written in "Awake" (Robert Ballou) a short novel describing the curious psychological reactions of her heroine to an unrequited love. The girl falls in love with an American doctor who seems to be attracted to her. Though the story is not written in the first person, everything takes place in the girl's mind.

The way in which the author consistently and carefully holds to her point of view, despite the temptations of expository writing, is admirable and reveals some technical skill. The contrast between two cultural attitudes [the girl is English] is brought out clearly though not profoundly. The novel is a sensitive one that gives sign of promise, but the book's main faults are thinness of material and a too facile philosophizing of life's deep and inner urges.

'The Way,' by Chicago Pastor, Puts Stress on Everyday Life

Dr. William Pierson Merrill, for sixteen years pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church in Chicago, has written a book, "The Way" [Macmillan], in which he expresses his belief that theology and religious theory are not of primary importance in the present day. He holds a new interpretation and dependence on the Christianity of Jesus applied to everyday life should concern the teachers, the leaders and should be inculcated into the people they guide. Dr. Merrill gives a meditation for every day, taken from a text in the Gospels, and gives a modern and liberal application of it.

"Gold Falcon" Sensation in British Circles

Anonymous Novel Winning Many Readers.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.] — In giving early news of the anonymous novel "The Gold Falcon" I suggested that it would cause something of a sensation. The sensation is in progress in this town, and the book is being widely and admiringly read. It will be published very shortly in the United States, for one American publisher, obtaining a copy before publication, began using the English telegraph service as soon as he had spent half a day with the book.

MISS BENSON.

The author of another novel of great interest, "Façade," is to visit the United States in the spring. This author is Miss Theodora Benson, and she will be accompanied by Miss Betty Askwith, with whom she formerly collaborated.

The news that Henry W. Nevinson had been married to Miss Evelyn Sharp, a friend of long standing, was a pleasant surprise to the literary world, and equally pleasant, in another way, is the announcement that Miss Sharp has written a book of reminiscences which will be published this season.

Miss Sharp is a favorite with English people on several counts. For one thing, many young women of today read, when they were younger, "The Youngest Girl in the School," and other stories of the same kind, although perhaps of lesser fame, by Miss Sharp, and many also know her as one of the most intelligent of feminists.

In the autobiography she will no doubt tell much about the feminist movement in England and its leaders, but I hope she will also communicate to a wider circle of adults the charm to which her girl readers surrendered.

The biography of E. Nesbit, the greatly loved author of that ever popular series of children's books about the Bastable family—"The Would-Be-Goods," etc.—has been very highly praised, as it deserves, for it has given the world a delightful portrait of a delightful woman. It is the work of Miss Doris Langley Moore, who made a literary reputation with her anonymous book, "The Technique of the Love Affair," to which William Gerhardi contributed a preface, and who followed this with a novel, less popular, but subtle and interesting, entitled "A Winter Passion."

Miss Moore is an accomplished writer.

BRIEF REVIEWS

BY M. D.

CANON BIRMINGHAM.

George A. Birmingham, a canon in the Church of England, author of many books, is a humorist of the first class. "Elizabeth and the Archdeacon" [Bobbs - Merrill] [a better title could have been chosen], summarizes explicitly and effectively the author's particular qualities as novelist and humorist. The archdeacon has been a very successful missionary in Badakak where savages and crocodiles abound. When he is finally recalled to the civilized world he is definitely unfit for it. In Corsica—he got there through the officiousness and efficiency of a series of earnest waiters—he is taken under the wing of the wholly sophisticated Millie. She teaches him all he should know about pajamas and night clubs and finally takes him back to England with her. The mild, pale, good hearted archdeacon, afflicted with a serious inferiority complex through the machinations of Millie, gets into the most ridiculous and at the same time pathetic messes that can be conceived by the mind of man. All turns out well in the end, with the assistance of the strong minded Elizabeth.

The character of the archdeacon furnishes the author with the chance to indulge his keen sense of humor, delicate, sharp, and for the most part consistently entertaining. It would be a morbid and insensitive reader indeed who could not find a laugh at least on every other page of the archdeacon's saga.

JAPAN REQUESTS HELP OF POWERS AGAINST CHINESE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, March 10.—The dispatch of a fresh division of Marshal Chiang Kai-shek's troops to Koupeikow pass today appeared likely to bring the war in Jehol province south of the Great Wall into north China.

Contrary to Japanese claims that Koupeikow, which is 65 miles northeast of Peiping, was taken Wednesday noon, it developed today that fierce fighting has been going on within the walled city. Japanese headquarters at Chinchow issued a bulletin saying that Maj. Gen. Tadashi Kawahara's 16th infantry completed the occupation of Koupeikow at 2:30 p. m. today.

Rush Fresh Troops.

Marshal Chiang, dictator of the Nanking national government and commander of all the Chinese armies, yesterday sent two supporting divisions to the Great Wall and a third today. This the Japanese interpret as a threat to the safety of their nationals in the Peiping-Tientsin area.

Japanese diplomats today asked the ministers of other nations to intercede and get the Chinese to withdraw from their positions. Otherwise, it was said, the Japanese might choose to send troops from Shanhaikwan over the Shanhaikwan-Peiping rail and motor roads south of the wall to move on Koupeikow from the south.

Accept Chang's Resignation.

Marshal Chiang and Finance Minister T. V. Soong today accepted the resignation of Gen. Chang Hsueh-liang as north China commander. Chang resigned all his commands and national offices and transferred the allegiance of his Manchurians to Marshal Chiang. However, it is uncertain if the Manchus will support the Nationalist commander and their presence in north China may develop into a menace. Chang is on his way to Shanghai by airplane.

AUTO INJURIES FATAL TO 75 YEAR OLD ACCOUNTANT

Bernard Harks, 75 years old, 4238 North Paulina street, an accountant employed by the Daprato Statuary company, 766 West Adams street, died at the Ravenswood hospital last night of injuries received a few hours earlier when he was struck by an automobile at Lawrence avenue and North Paulina street. Max Redman, 1000 North Richmond street, driver of the car, was arrested and released on bonds, pending arraignment on a charge of reckless driving. He was ordered to appear at the inquest this morning at the undertaking rooms at 4542 Ravenswood avenue.

This death and two others earlier in the day increased the Cook county automobile toll for 1933 to 154. The other victims:

Louis Imhof, 37 years old, 4938 Wentworth avenue. Died at the German Deaconess hospital of injuries incurred Feb. 14 when he was struck by one automobile while standing on the running board of another at 47th street and Wentworth avenue.

Mrs. Minnie Schipplock, 59 years old, 1104 South Mayfield avenue. Died in the West Suburban hospital. She was struck by an automobile on March 3 as she got off a street car in front of 5900 West Roosevelt road. The driver, Thomas Lackovic, 27 years old, 1217 Highland avenue, Berwyn, was notified to appear at the inquest today.

The man killed Tuesday night when a bus of the Chicago West Towns Railway company collided with a truck was identified yesterday as William Hoerman, 2501 Highview avenue, Elmhurst. The accident occurred at Wolf road and Lake street, Melrose Park.

RECEIVER NAMED BY BARRETT IS OUSTED BY JUDGE

Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of Waukegan yesterday ruled that State Auditor Barrett had exceeded his authority in appointing a receiver for the closed Lake County State bank of North Chicago. The court order removed William L. O'Connor of Chicago, appointed by the auditor, and appointed James H. Ciendenin of Lake Forest as receiver of the bank.

In a 13 page opinion Judge Shurtleff denounced the plan of the state auditor to place all closed banks under one receiver at the central source of government. He compared the plan to the system of liquidating and supervising national banks and said that the latter has "in too many cases been most grossly oppressive, less fruitful of results and subject to very grave criticism by reason of the fact that the entire system is managed and controlled from Washington, a thousand miles from the scene of the trouble."

"If the same course is pursued in the matter of state banks," the opinion said, "and the auditor of public accounts has control over state banks, in a very short time all litigation pertaining to such banks would be taken to the Circuit court of Sangamon county, the seat of government, to the great disadvantage, annoyance, and expense of litigants."

BOY TAMPERING WITH AUTO IS SHOT BY POLICE

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.

Automobiles stolen, 89; recovered, 87; stripped, 16 [from police records for twenty-four hours ending at midnight Thursday]. There were no court cases.

Joseph Rudy, 17 years old, 1241 Chicago avenue, an alleged auto theif, was shot in the head last night when he resisted arrest by Policemen Joseph Krysinski and Thomas Sheridan of the stolen auto detail. They came upon him tampering with a car in front of 1020 North Hermitage avenue. As Policeman Krysinski stepped up Rudy leveled what appeared to be a revolver, but what was in reality a shiny wrench. The policeman fired. The boy was taken to St. Mary's hospital and then removed to the Bridewell hospital.

REVEAL SPANISH MASSACRE; JAIL POLICE DIRECTOR

Find 12 Helpless Men Were Shot Down.

BY JAY ALLEN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, March 10.—Director of public security until a few days ago, Capt. Arturo Menendez was put in jail tonight as a result of the findings of a parliamentary commission which went to Casa Viejas, near Cadiz, to investigate rumors of a summary execution of peasants by police during the anarcho-syndicalist revolt of Jan. 10.

The commission found that the ugly tales told by the opposition were true and that 12 villagers had been rounded up and massacred by the republic's shock police in the ruins of a cottage which had been bombed, hours after the uprising had been quelled.

Captain Admits Massacre.

Capt. Rojas, who was in charge at the town, admitted he fired the first shot and ordered the wholesale slaughter, but he insisted he acted on instructions from the director of public security to take "no wounded, no prisoners, and respect no white flags."

Menendez, who became national hero after his energetic showing in putting down the Sanjurjo revolt against the republic on Aug. 10, denies the charge.

"I'm neither an ogre nor a cheka chief," he said.

But the fact remains that he kept the truth from the government, which now is put in a dangerous situation in parliament.

Faces Combined Opposition.

Although the commission insists that there is no evidence that any cabinet minister is to blame for the savagery at Casa Viejas, Premier Azana's left wing Socialist government is seriously endangered. It is fighting a parliamentary offensive from the combined forces of right wing republicans, monarchists, syndicalists, and communists. The government is also taking precautions for another revolt, which it is widely rumored as imminent.

"GREATEST IRISH MOTHER" LEAVES ESTATE OF $6,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, March 10.—Mrs. Margaret Pearse, mother of Patrick Pearse, leader of the rebellion of 1916, in her will, made public today, left about $6,000 and several houses. "Stendas," where Patrick carried on a school, was left to her daughter, Margaret, now a member of the dail eireann. When Margaret dies "Stendas" is to remain the property of the nation as a memorial to Patrick.

Patrick Pearse, first president of the "Irish Republic," and his brother, William, a promising young sculptor, were executed by a British firing squad during the Easter rebellion.

In 1924 Mrs. Pearse spoke in Chicago in the interest of St. Edna's school, founded by Patrick. Known as the "greatest mother in all Ireland," Mrs. Pearse once said: 'Give me not your sympathy, but your congratulations. I am overjoyed that God gave me two noble boys who could die for such a cause."

MRS. HOPKINS TO BE BURIED IN VERMONT TODAY

Mrs. John Henry Hopkins, wife of the rector emeritus of the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer, 56th street and Blackstone avenue, will be buried at Burlington, Vt., this morning, following services at St. Paul's church in that city. Mrs. Hopkins died Thursday at Grand Isle, Vt., where she and her husband had been living in retirement since Dr. Hopkins' resignation as rector of the Church of the Redeemer three years ago. Death was due to a stroke of paralysis.

Mrs. Hopkins was Marie Moulton Graves of Burlington, Vt. During the 20 year rectorate of Dr. Hopkins at the Church of the Redeemer she was active in women's civic and club work throughout the south side of the city.

Church leaders among women throughout the country credit Mrs. Hopkins with the origination of the United Women's thank offering in the Episcopal church which has presented amounts totaling nearly $1,000,000 triennially for missionary projects of the church. She was also the organizer of first federations of women's activities within parishes and communities.

Simultaneous services will be held in Burlington and at the Church of the Redeemer this morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. E. S. White, who is Dr. Hopkins' successor, will celebrate the requiem Eucharist here.

WHEATON REFORM LEADER STARTS SUIT FOR $50,000

Mrs. Grace Gregory, Wheaton reform leader, filed the praecipe of a suit for $50,000 yesterday in the Du Page county Circuit court against the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroad and O. C. Gettinger, superintendent of transportation of the line.

A year ago Mrs. Gregory accused Mrs. Jessie Erickson, a divorcee of Glen Ellyn, of carrying on an affair with her husband, Albert Gregory, a motorman on the interurban line. Mrs. Erickson paid Mrs. Gregory $5,000, but last summer Mrs. Erickson sued for the return of the money with interest, and was awarded $6,500. Mrs. Gregory is appealing the verdict.

Following the suit, it was said, Gregory was discharged from his job as a motorman. Mrs. Gregory, who is a member of the bar, acted as her own attorney in the action started yesterday. She could not be reached during the day, and railroad officials said they could not explain the suit.

RICH VANISH IN ENGLAND; TAXES EAT UP WEALTH

Millionaire Class Drops as Duties Rise.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 10.—Taxation is taking a steady toll among British millionaires. The rich have been soaked so hard that their contributions to the national treasury have reached and passed the point of diminishing returns.

Death duties are also on the wane, but a persistent treasury manages to increase its income by screwing up the rate of taxation and widening the bracket to include salaries which are untouched by the tax eaters of any other country.

Millionaires Vanish.

A millionaire in Britain has an income of £50,000 a year, or 5 per cent on £1,000,000. This is practically five times the income of a dollar millionaire, with the pound sterling at par. According to figures for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1932, which have just been released, millionaire incomes were enjoyed by 532 persons during the year, against 562 in the previous year.

Comparisons of high incomes for the two years shows a drop in all classifications among the pound millionaire class. Those with par incomes of $250,000 to $375,000 dropped from 292 to 263 during the fiscal year which ended nearly a year ago. Their earnings fell from $87,465,000 to $79,015,000. In the bracket of incomes between $375,000 and $500,000 there was a slight increase of ten, from 106 in 1930-'31 to 116 in 1931-'32.

But this in part is due to recruits from above. Those whose incomes exceeded $500,000 decreased by 20, from 164 to 144.

Altogether last year's millionaires made $275,755,000. In the previous year they paid taxes on $12,640,000 more income than the exchequer was able to tax in 1932.

Surtax Payers Drop.

Further reductions are recorded among surtax payers, or those who pay an additional assessment after they have met the standard taxation rate of 25 per cent. Surtax begins with incomes of $10,000 or more, and the rate increases rapidly as the amount of income increases. A person drawing more than $500,000 annually in Britain has to give 62½ per cent to the government.

Surtax payers in 1930-'31 totaled 105,577, including millionaires, and they paid supertax on incomes aggregating $2,919,415,000. Last year the figure dropped to 105,517 surtax payers, or 60 less than the year before, and there was a decrease in their incomes of $22,845,000 inasmuch as the total of their earnings fell to $2,896,570,000.

Death duties registered a sharp fall of nearly 25 per cent. In 1930-'31 the treasury benefited to the extent of $415,460,000, as against $323,420,000 last year. The chief decrease was registered in estate taxes, with a slump of $85,000,000.

MOSES W. DYKAAR, SCULPTOR, DIES UNDER TRAIN

New York, March 10.—[Special.]—Moses W. Dykaar, sculptor who modeled a bust of the late President Coolidge and other noted Americans for the senate gallery, committed suicide today by leaping in front of a subway express train in the Bronx.

Dykaar had been suffering from a nervous ailment, a condition aggravated by worry over economic conditions. The motorman of the train and other witnesses told the police they saw the sculptor leap from the platform.

Mrs. Dykaar said her husband had been ill about three months. He left home early in the morning to go to his studio, she explained, and she had expected him home about the time he was killed.

Mrs. Dykaar said the government had once allotted her husband space in the national gallery, and that he had modeled busts of Mr. Coolidge, former Vice President Curtis and Gen. Pershing.

U. S. LAYS PLANS TO DICTATE USE OF GOLD SUPPLY

Only Licensed Dealers May Handle Metal.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—Gold is to become America's hidden metal, handled only by dealers licensed by the federal government, under plans now being drafted by the treasury department to replace the emergency taboo on all gold transactions.

Foreign shipments of gold will continue to be banned, and the United States, unofficially off the international gold standard, will stabilize its currency by permitting only specially licensed institutions to deal in foreign exchange.

Domestically, the gold standard will be maintained by the system of special dealers from whom persons owing debts payable in gold may purchase the precious metal necessary to meet their needs.

U. S. Will Control Gold.

Licensing of dealers, however, will bring no relaxation in the central government's grip on the country's gold. Dealers will be required to keep complete records of each of their transactions, so that the government may check them up and make sure no gold is being hoarded. Only the licensed dealers will be allowed to purchase gold from the government, which already is moving to gather into its vaults all the gold in the country.

The restrictions on gold are not to prevent the normal use of the metal in the industrial arts. This assurance was given in a treasury statement issued late tonight. The method of distributing gold for such usage is to be determined by the treasury at a later date.

Setting up of the new system of dealers in gold, who probably will be banks, comes logically as the second step in the government's drive to break up private hoarding of gold. The emergency banking law passed last night, already lays heavy penalties on the retention of gold by persons or corporations, including banks.

Much Gold in Hoarding.

Approximately 420 million dollars' worth of gold has fled into hoarding during the last five weeks preceding the gold embargo. Most of this sum was lost to the treasury in the first week in March. Treasury holdings of gold coin and bullion dropped a little more than 118 million dollars during the first four days of the month. Meanwhile the total gold certificates outstanding went up 153 million dollars. The other 150 million dollar increase came during February.

As yet the government's new drive to bring back gold from hoards has had little effect, lacking sufficient time to get under way. Federal reserve authorities are collecting from banks and investment houses the records of gold withdrawals, which these institutions have been keeping for the last two years.

Penalty Being Considered.

What actually can be done to hoarders of gold, and especially of gold coin, which is legal tender, seems to be the big obstacle in the path of the campaign. The treasury has turned the question over to Attorney General Cummings.

If the drive against gold hoards accomplishes its purpose gold will be only in the hands of the specially licensed agents, who will have the sole right to buy gold from the government. Persons or companies who go to the agents to pay gold obligations and those who receive the payment, may never see the gold that theoretically passes between them.

A company wishing to buy gold may merely deposit other money with the gold dealer with instructions to credit the creditors' account with the gold. The creditor, in turn, may be required by the anti-hoarding laws to sell his new gold immediately to the government for other money.

There is about $12,000,000,000 in monetary gold in the world. Of this amount, the United States holds about $4,243,000,000, or somewhat more than one-third.

Roosevelt's Son-in-Law Joins Chicago Grain Board

Curtis B. Dall, son-in-law of President Roosevelt, connected with E. F. Hutton & Co., New York City, one of the largest of the stock houses, has bought a membership on the Chicago Board of Trade. He is also a member of the New York Stock and Cotton exchanges.

Packers to Pay Cash for Stock and Avert Closing of Market

Further complications that threatened to close the live stock market developed yesterday, following the Thursday night announcement that the bank holiday had been extended. At an emergency meeting of packers and commission men, however, it was decided to keep the market open.

Four of the largest packers assured the Live Stock exchange that ample cash is available to meet payment of all checks issued for the purchase of live animals. A report late in the afternoon had it that Washington had made special provisions at one of the stockyards banks whereby such checks could be cashed immediately, in order to keep the market open.

Hogs Rally 10 to 25 Cents.

Receipts of hogs were lighter and prices rallied, with 10 to 25 cents of the recent sharp losses recovered. The phenomenal bulge in the market resulting from the bank holiday earlier in the week has flattened out in most divisions. Values of most live animals, as well as wholesale meat prices generally, are back to where they were a week ago.

Yesterday's recovery in hogs brought the $4 quotation into play again, when several carloads of light butchers reached this mark. The general average for the day showed an advance of 15 cents, but it still is 35 cents under the high day of the week.

Cattle Prices Steady.

The earlier report of the possibility of closing the Chicago live stock market indefinitely brought a rush of buying orders into the cattle division, where only 1,000 head, the usual Friday supply, were on sale. These cleared quickly at fully steady prices, compared with the preceding session, but losses of 25 to 75 cents were cited in comparison with the high point of the week.

Declines both in prices of live lambs and in the wholesale lamb trade were halted yesterday, but trading progressed slowly in both markets and the clearance was not entirely satisfactory at a late hour in the afternoon. Top grades stopped at $5.50. This was paid for lambs weighing from 75 to 100 pounds.

J. R. Thompson Seeks Control of Meal Chain

A second attempt to wrest control of the John R. Thompson company, national restaurant chain, from the group of Chicago capitalists headed by Charles A. McCulloch is being made by John R. Thompson Jr., son of the company's founder.

Thompson's plan became known yesterday when stockholders of the company received a letter from him soliciting proxies to be voted at the annual meeting on March 21. Thompson was replaced as president of the company last December by William M. Collins. Collins recently announced his intention to submit his resignation as president at the annual meeting.

Second Effort to Gain Control.

This is Thompson's second attempt to oust the McCulloch management. Shortly before the annual meeting last year Thompson began to solicit proxies to be voted against the management. The fight ended in a compromise and Thompson was reelected president of the restaurant firm.

The McCulloch group won control of the company in March, 1931. Associated with Mr. McCulloch were John D. Hertz and the late William Wrigley Jr.

In his letter to stockholders Thompson alleges that the shrinkage in the company's earnings during the depression has been the result of inexperienced management. He asserts that while he held the title of president until December last year he had been stripped of any real authority since the McCulloch group came into power.

Cites Family Interests.

"More than 24 per cent of the outstanding stock of the Thompson company is owned, either outright or through trusts or holding companies (wherein they have beneficial interests) by members of the Thompson family, and they naturally are very vitally interested in the company's welfare," he says.

The present directors of the company own less than 14 per cent of the outstanding stock, Thompson alleges.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 10.—[Special.]—Fifty men representing farmers' organizations spent all day today wrangling over farm relief without reaching an agreement.

Behind closed doors in the department of agriculture they fought over the provisions of a relief program which, when agreed on, is to be submitted to the administration for transmission to congress. Late in the day a statement was made.

"The farm group agrees," the statement continued, "that farm production must be adjusted to consumption and favors the principles of the so-called domestic allotment plan as a means of reducing production and restoring farm buying power. They admitted serious but not insurmountable differences of opinion in the method to be used. The proposal that some plans of renting land out of production be adopted is receiving favorable consideration."

SPIRIT OF 'CARRY ON' TEMPERS BANK CRISIS, TRADE REVIEW SAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, March 10.—The strong spirit to "carry on" limited the effect of the banking crisis on general business during the last week, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today.

Optimism became more pronounced when it was realized that the suspension of banking facilities would result in no devaluation of the American dollar, the review said.

"A difficult week in all branches of activity has passed without leaving the disastrous consequences in its trail which at first seemed inevitable," the review said. "With the exception of a few districts where commercial life was brought almost to a standstill, a favorable credit standing brought all the benefits of ready currency and business was enabled to flow through its usual channels without other than minor deflections."

LONDON'S DEBT RISES 19 MILLION IN YEAR'S TIME

LONDON, March 10.—The aggregate net debt of the city of London as disclosed by the finance committee of the London county council is rising steadily. The committee's report for the year ended March 31, 1931, places the indebtedness depending solely on taxation at $764,930,000 with sterling at par. At the end of March, 1930, the figure was $745,035,000. Thus within a year the debt rose $19,895,000.

About 40 per cent of the total debt is attributable to revenue undertakings. These, with municipal housing schemes excluded, fall $290,000 short of providing sufficient revenue to meet debt charges, which total $18,290,000.

Housing projects account for 30 per cent of the total indebtedness. This debt rose about $16,000,000 during the year to $232,590,000. The charges on this amount reached $13,000,000. Of this $7,350,000 was met out of housing revenues.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET GETS READY TO REOPEN

Plan to Trade as Soon as Banks Function.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Plans went forward yesterday for reopening of the Chicago Board of Trade as quickly as adequate banking facilities are available. President P. B. Carey and other officials of the board, who returned from Washington conferences, began clearing away technical obstacles so that the least possible delay would be involved.

"We are being importuned by millers, farmer coöperative groups, exporters, and other interests at home and abroad to reëstablish all trading facilities," said Mr. Carey. "We appreciate the difficulties being encountered by the various interests because of the lack of facilities offered by the futures market."

"All that blocks a resumption of the grain markets is reopening of banks, with proper distribution of funds to the key cities of grain distribution. This may require a short period of delay after the central banks have resumed business. We have the hearty coöperation of Washington officials."

Wheat Higher at Winnipeg.

For the first time this week the Winnipeg wheat market was reported yesterday as having been affected by news that directly applied to that grain. Sales of No. 2 hard winter at Kansas City at 48½ to 49 cents, or 2½ to 5 cents above the price that prevailed a week ago, brought in sufficient buying in the Canadian market to lift the May to 53¾ cents, or 1¾ cents above Thursday's finish. The upturn followed early buying by a Chicago house, which absorbed the surplus in the pit.

While there is still considerable uncertainty as to what American grain markets will do when they reopen, Winnipeg reported that confidence in an advance in prices is rapidly increasing, and that the longer the reopening is postponed, the sharper might be the advance. At the close yesterday the Canadian market showed ¾ to ⅞ cents higher, with May at 52¼ cents; July, 51⅜ to 51½ cents; and October, 55 to 55⅛ cents. Compared with a week ago prices at the close were 3¾ to 4¼ cents higher.

Liverpool Expresses Confidence.

More interest was taken in oats and other grains in Winnipeg, with the former closing ½ to ⅝ cents higher, with May at 26¾ cents; while rye gained ¾ cent and sold at a new high for the week, May being 35¾ cents at the last. Barley was ⅜ to ⅝ cent higher and flaxseed was ⅞ cent higher.

A Liverpool cable to Bartlett Frazier & Co., reporting less pressure to sell on the part of Argentine and Canada, also added that confidence of the grain trade there was rapidly increasing. The dependence of the various countries on Chicago wheat quotations was emphasized yesterday when Broomhall reported that business in Manitobas was limited and offerings few. Liverpool closed ⅛ to ½ penny higher.

Chicago interests had bids for No. 2 hard winter wheat yesterday, which figured out equal to 55 cents per bushel, or about 6 cents above the close on the May future on March 3.

The books for the transfer of stock will be closed on Thursday, March 9, 1933, at the close of business on that day, and will be reopened on Wednesday, April 12, 1933.

Dated, February 15, 1933.

FRED W. SARGENT, President.
BARRET CONWAY, Secretary.

Advance in Price of Cotton Starts Chicago Buying Wave

Chicago cotton goods dealers, especially those handling cotton duck goods, enjoyed a brisk trade yesterday due to the rise in cotton prices and it was predicted by some of them that boom trade conditions would develop with the opening of the banks and commodity exchange markets.

J. N. Ralston of William H. Barrell & Co., 323 South Franklin street, said the increase of 3 cents a pound for light duck cotton over last week's price had resulted in a flood of orders for his firm. Other firms along Market and Franklin streets were equally busy yesterday.

Buyers of cotton goods for some of the larger merchandising companies of Chicago expressed the view that a rise in the price of raw cotton, considered inevitable when the New York exchange reopens, would have a pronounced reaction on the cotton industry.

Higher Price Expected.

The closing quotation on raw cotton when the New York market closed last Friday was 6.35 cents per pound. It is expected the price will range from 8½ to 10 cents a pound when the exchange reopens.

With the exception of a short period last August, when raw cotton reached 9 cents a pound, the average price of this commodity for the last year has been from 5 to 6 cents a pound. A normal price for cotton is about 14 cents a pound. Over supply of raw material, a condition which still exists, has long been blamed by the industry for low prices and has resulted in federal restrictions on production.

Commodity Markets Orderly.

New York, March 10.—(AP)—Most commodity markets today moved in an orderly course, minus the nervousness of the last few days, under the promise of an early restoration of banking facilities.

Products commanding prices above those of the previous day included butter, live poultry, and Santos grade coffee. Raw sugar receded slightly and such items as dried fruits, eggs, dressed poultry, cocoa, and refined sugar were unchanged.

Cotton holders were chary about naming prices for spots, but in the Liverpool market prices were run up sharply. Talk was heard of some small transactions in spot cotton at as high as 8½ cents a pound, or about 2 cents above the price of New York middling last Friday.

The price of seats on the cotton exchange advanced $1,500 to $12,000 today.

Price of Silver Eases.

Silver, which jumped ⅝ of a cent yesterday to the highest level since last August, was quoted ¼ of a cent lower at 29¾ cents an ounce. Bar silver in London was ¼ of a pence lower. Zinc continued firm at 3.05 to 3.10 cents a pound, up 1-20 to 1-10 of a cent. Quick silver was quoted $1 a flask higher at $53 to $54. Spot lead was held at 3.35 cents a pound, up 1-10 of a cent. A small tonnage of copper was reported sold at 5½ cents, a point to which level the price was advanced yesterday from 5 cents.

Woolen and worsted markets continued firm, with Boston quotations on wool slightly above those of the previous day.

Reopening of the Japanese exchanges after a suspension since last Friday was signalized by a sharp advance in the principal grades of raw silk. On active bidding quotations jumped the equivalent of about 15 cents a pound.

U. S. Steel Up Two Points in London Mart

LONDON, March 10.—United States shares on the London Stock exchange closed generally higher. Traders seemed favorably impressed by President Roosevelt's banking policy and an attitude of quiet confidence prevailed throughout the trading.

United States Steel scored a net gain for the day of two points to $41, figuring exchange at par, which represented an improvement of 2½ points since last Friday. General Motors reappeared on the active list today for the first time this week, selling at $16, as against $14 last Saturday.

Drug, incorporated, advanced $1 to $49.50, National Dairy products and New York Central each gained ⅛ to $19 and $25 respectively, while International Telephone and Telegraph rose ¼ to $9.75.

Closing quotations of leading American shares traded on the stock exchange today, with the net change from the previous close, follow:

Stocks—	Closing.	Net chge.
Canadian Pacific	14	+ ⅛
Drug Inc.	49½	+1
General Motors	16	+ ⅛
International Nickel	11⅝	+ ⅛
Inte. Tel. & Tel.	9¾	+ ⅛
Nat. Dairy Products	19	+ ⅛
N. Y. Central	25	+ ⅛
U. S. Steel	41	+2

[Quotations in dollars at 4 shillings to the dollar.]

Paris Prices Easy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, March 10.—Share prices on the bourse declined today as traders reduced their holdings, awaiting further action on the banking situation in the United States. A mild buying movement developed in the afternoon, however, and an improved tone prevailed at the close.

Stocks Steady in Berlin.

BERLIN, March 10.—Stock prices on the boerse were irregular today, but a buying movement in the afternoon turned the market firm.

Montreal Firm.

MONTREAL, March 10.—The stock market was quiet but firm today. International Nickel advanced one quarter of a point, while Canadian Pacific was unchanged.

Toronto Trading Dull.

TORONTO, March 10.—Trading was slow but stock prices were steady on the Toronto exchange today. Canadian Pacific gained an eighth. International Nickel held steady and International Petroleum was up ¼. Food stocks were strong for the most part.

FORMATION OF NEW STRAUS SECURITIES CORPORATION TOLD

Announcement was made last night of the formation of the Straus Securities corporation to do a general security business, dealing in real estate securities, municipals, public utilities and industrials, and, with improved conditions, to originate and distribute securities of its own underwriting.

J. D. Blosser, executive vice president of the new corporation, had this to say about the new organization: "Although the intrinsic value of the bonds originally underwritten by S. W. Straus & Co., should not be affected by the receivership of that company, the executives of the new corporation believe that there is a need for a market for these securities which a strong selling organization may provide. It was primarily to meet this need that the Straus Securities corporation was organized.

"The new concern is well financed. The Straus Securities corporation has taken offices on the seventh floor of the Straus building, Michigan and Jackson. It also has branch offices in Detroit, Milwaukee and Indianapolis. It's expected that in a short time the business will be in full operation throughout its entire territory."

S. J. T. Straus is president of the new corporation. Associated with him will be Nicholas Roberts and other executives and members formerly associated with S. W. Straus & Co.

DOLLAR DROPS; EUROPE FEARS WORD 'INDEFINITE'

The American dollar still was not quoted officially in European financial centers yesterday, but in the bootleg market is sagged sharply on the news of President Roosevelt's "indefinite" extension of the bank holiday. Traders on the "black bourses" in Paris, Berlin, Zurich, and elsewhere were reported by the World bank at Basle quickly cut their rates on the assumption that the United States situation was more serious than had been assumed.

Sterling and the French franc moved higher in terms of the Canadian dollar, the pound moving to $4.13, up five cents and the franc rose to 4.73 cents.

NEW BILL TAKES FORECLOSURES OUT OF COURTS

Puts Sheriff Sales Fee at $3.50.

BY AL CHASE.

Foreclosure sales by the sheriff, independent of the courts and without the expense of high fees to masters in chancery, receivers, and their attorneys, are the objectives of the new law sought at Springfield by the new super bondholders' protective group recently formed in Chicago at the suggestion of Rufus C. Dawes. Speed and economy are expected to result if the bill is approved.

If enacted Illinois will line up with twenty other states which already permit extra-judicial foreclosures; that is, using a power of sale by the sheriff without going to court. The proposed law will be optional with judicial foreclosure and will affect only apartment and commercial buildings. It will have no period of redemption. When a sale is made, forty-two days after first notice, it will be final.

Doesn't Apply to Homes.

The small home or the farm will continue under the present judicial foreclosure law, with the regular fifteen months' redemption period.

The economy angle to the new law is to be effected by a drastic paring down of attorney's fees and other legal costs. For instance, instead of the usual heavy foreclosure court fees the sheriff will receive $3.50 for making the sale.

Then, in addition to the usual costs of recording, the attorney (if the mortgagee feels that he must have an attorney, though one is not essential to the success of the sheriff's sale) has the following legal schedule provided by the new law: $25 if the mortgage is $500 or less, $50 for mortgages over $500 and not over $1,000, $75 over $1,000 and not over $5,000, $100 over $5,000 and not over $10,000, $200 over $10,000 and not over $40,000, one-half of 1 per cent on mortgages over $40,000.

Bar's Fee Schedule Higher.

The new fee schedule adopted by the Chicago Bar association allows an attorney to charge $350 for a $5,000 foreclosure and $600 for a $10,000 mortgage.

The proposed law provides that every mortgage or trust deed executed after the adoption of the new law which has a power of sale may be foreclosed by a sheriff's sale if there has been some default by which the power to sell has become operative. The foreclosure may be conducted by an agent of the record owner of the mortgage or by the trustee under the mortgage.
